United Way blasts welfare

McCarthy disputes figures

Most welfare recipients in Greater Vancouver are still living below the poverty level, says a United Way report released today.

And Victoria welfare recipients are just as badly off, according to a spokesman for the agency.

Bruce Levens was commenting on a report by The United Way's Lower Mainland social planning and research committee

The report states flatly that assistance benefits have remained at the same degree of inadequacy for the last 20 years.

Levens, assistant director of the committee, said while shelter costs in Victoria may be slightly lower than Vancouver, food costs might be a bit higher.

"The situations would definitely be comparable," Levens said.

The report says that pricing a basketful of low-cost food, allowing for clothes, personal care and bus travel, points to a money shortfall of from 51 to 75 per cent for persons first going on welfare, and of 12 to 75 per cent for longer-term recipients.

Victoria United Way board member Harold Moist agrees with Levens.

"Of course, by the time we get the reports out and the government reacts, we're already another year behind, and the government never gives everything that's asked for anyway."

Moist had high praise for the social planning and research committee.

"They've always been known for being objective and very careful with their reports," he said.

"They have a reputation for being very accurate with their figures."

But Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy today called the figures misleading.

"They're comparing oranges and apples," she said.

"We warned them of that last year. They said they were sorry and they understood the problem. Now this year they've done the same thing again."

The most blatant error, she said, is that the United Way used high Lower Mainland rents as the basis for calculating shelter costs.

"They have ignored the many welfare recipients in rooming houses and boarding houses," she said, and based their calculations on Vancouver's high-rent districts like Shaughnessy and the West End.

She also said the United Way figures ignore client earnings and other benefits received such as family allowances, renters allowance and child tax credits.

"If these adjustments are made, the client's disposable income would be found to at least match and probably exceed the need levels established by the United Way and Statistics Canada," she said.

McCarthy said since 1976, welfare rates have increased far faster than they would have if they had been indexed to the cost of living.

However, NDP critic Rosemary Brown called the United Way's poverty level figures "very conservative, far below the ones chosen by the Canadian Council on Social Development or the Bureau of Statistics."

"There is absolutely no way a person in receipt of welfare can even live at the United Way's poverty level," she said.

The report says singles and couples under 31 years of age are particularly hard hit and are forced to choose between eating less and moving into inadequate but cheaper accommodations.

The study, based on figures supplied by the human resources ministry which administers the GAIN program, says a 36-year-old woman with a boy, 10, and a girl, 13, needs $693 a month for food and shelter.

Her maximum income from GAIN, if she has been on income assistance less than four months, is $560, leaving a shortfall of $133.

The same family, on assistance for more than four months, would receive $595 from GAIN, leaving a permanent monthly shortfall of $98.

The report says a couple with three children under 12 would require an estimated

TEHRAN — Each mangled limb, each scar, each disfigured face told a story of torture, beating and random shooting, as some 200 Iranians lined up in the snow today, waiting for a chance to talk about their life under the now-deposed shah of Iran.

They had come to testify before a United Nations commission investigating grievances against the former monarch. As they waited outside the UN office here, they related to reporters their horror stories.

Some said they had spent years in the shah's prisons, while others carried pictures of sons and daughters who they said died protesting the shah's rule, beaten to death in jail or gunned down by security forces during street demonstrations.

"In November, 1978, when there were demonstrations outside, some soldiers burst into our house and shot my son," said one man, his eyes red with tears at the memory.

And, said a 23-year-old business graduate: "I was arrested for possessing a photograph of Imam (Ayatollah) Khomeini. In prison the secret police attached electrodes to my testicles and tortured me."

Another man pulled up his trousers to reveal long, ugly scars on both legs which he said were the result of being burned with a soldering iron during a spell in prison in the central Iranian city of Isfahan.

"The SAVAK (secret police) in Isfahan beat me so badly on the head that I lost my hearing in one ear and I cannot see straight," said a thin youth, waving a medical report describing his condition when he was released from jail in October, 1978.

A university lecturer came to tell the five-man UN panel of lawyers and diplomats about his nephew, shot dead during a sit-in at the higher education ministry here on Christmas Day, 1978.

A source close to the commission said examination of the allegations will continue "for the next couple of days." The UN commission also heard testimony from Iranian jurists Monday about the shah's alleged misdeeds.

Bani-Sadr made his first visit to the embassy Monday since he was elected president Jan. 25 and, with other members of the governing Revolutionary Council, joined some of the militants on a platform atop the wall surrounding the compound.

Thousands paraded past in snow and rain, chanting anti-American slogans and holding up Khomeini post-

U.S. 'guarantees' Afghan neutrality

Times News Services

President Carter, in a letter delivered to Yugoslavia today, offered to support a neutral Afghanistan if the Soviet Union withdraws promptly from that Southwest Asian country.

Carter's comments, in response to a letter from gravely ill Yugoslav President Tito, followed an apparent offer by the Soviet Union to withdraw "as soon as all forms of outside interference directed against the government and people of Afghanistan are fully terminated."

Details of Carter's letter were described by an official of his administration who asked not to be identified by name.

In his report, the official said Carter "reaffirms that the United States did not interfere in the internal affairs of Afghanistan and that with the prompt withdrawal of all Soviet troops from that country, the United States would be willing to join in a guarantee of true neutrality and non-interference in Afghanistan's internal affairs."

The official declined to characterize Carter's letter as a response to a speech Friday by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

In that speech, Brezhnev said: "Let the U.S. together with the neighbors of Afghanistan guarantee (non-interference) and then the needs of Soviet military assistance will cease to exist."

Carter's comments were contained in a letter delivered today in Belgrade, the official said. He was answering a letter from Tito, who wrote to Carter and Brezhnev in a plea for continued detente between the superpowers.

The source said a guarantee of neutrality would involve, in addition to the United States, Afghanistan's neighbors — Iran, Pakistan and the Soviet Union.

Meanwhile, in further efforts to express displeasure with Soviet military involvement in Afghanistan, Carter Monday banned the export of phosphates to the Soviet Union.

The ban "for an indefinite period" followed the temporary embargo begun Feb. 6 by the administration.

Phosphates are used in fertilizers and as animal-feed supplements.

But administration officials opposed a congressional move Monday to bar Soviet merchant ships from U.S. ports, saying Carter has sufficiently responded to the Soviet invasion.

More than 50 members of the House, including Merchant Marine Committee chairman John Murphy, D-N.Y., have sponsored a resolution urging Carter to give

A week's delay in starting the modifications to the Queen of Prince Rupert will make it tough to get the ferry ready for the normal start of the Seattle-Victoria run, a spokesman for the B.C. Steamship Corporation said today.

Transport Minister Alex Fraser announced today the ferry will continue on the Prince Rupert, Bella Bella and Ocean Falls run until April 6.

Originally the Rupert was to be pulled off the run April 1 to enter drydock for major renovations before starting the Victoria-Seattle service in mid-May.

The BCSC spokesman warned the week's delay in starting the modifications will make things "very tight".

"Even with six weeks it was going to be tight, this makes it that much tighter," he said.

He said the modifications will be fairly extensive and BCSC officials are guessing the work will be done by the Yarrows shipyard because of the availability of the Esquimalt Graving Dock.

Yarrows general manager Don Challinor said he cannot confirm this until B.C. Ferries makes an announcement.

B.C. Ferries operations manager George Baldwin was not available for comment.

Fraser said the extra week on the mid-coast run "hopefully" should not interfere with the traditional start of the summer service to Seattle in mid-May.

The extra week will cover the Easter holiday period that was concerning people in the three facilities.

With the ferry Queen of Surrey not scheduled to take over the mid-coast run until June 1, residents of the coastal communities have been complaining loudly they would be without their basic transportation for two months.

Now Fraser says the Surrey should be out of drydock by May 7 and, following trial runs, take over the mid-coast service by May 15, and possibly earlier.

With the Rupert staying on an extra week and the Surrey going into service earlier than scheduled, "that means instead of a hiatus of two months we're talking about maybe five weeks of no service for the coast," Fraser said.

SEATTLE (AP) — Eaten any good chairs lately?

If not, here's your chance. The Pacific Science Center is sponsoring an edible chair contest on March 15 in conjunction with a chair design exhibition.

The rules state the chair must be 90 per cent edible — composed of vegetables, bread, cake or candy held together by toothpicks, glue, wire or rubber bands. The science centre says no chairs of ice or meat products will be allowed.

The chair doesn't have to be lifesize or capable of supporting weight but it must resemble a chair and have four legs and a back.

Single decal stops sneaks

If you're wondering why you get only one licence plate decal for your car this year instead of two, it's a bid by the motor vehicles branch to keep the motoring public honest.

Superintendent of Motor Vehicles R.G. Whitlock explains there has been a lot of fancy licence-plate shuffling in past years.

Some sneaky drivers who own two vehicles would buy just one set of plates then use a single plate on each car, thus saving himself the cost of licencing and insuring the second vehicle.

Now it's a one-decal, one-car situation.

"Just issuing one decal we can adequately identify the car for most police needs and it means we don't get the misuse of plates," Whitlock said.

"We've done it before with dealers' licences and it worked very well."

All drivers have to have their new insurance decal on by the end of the month — and they go on rear licence plates.

How will Trudeau put west reps in cabinet?

Times News Services

The next Canadian House of Commons will meet with no representation in the governing Liberal party from the three most western provinces and this poses a tough problem for Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau.

Trudeau's options range from appointing western senators to his cabinet to some sort of advisory council, or to the unlikely suggestion from New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent for a body of MPs selected on a proportional representation basis.

The Broadbent scheme has been rejected by Opposition leader Joe Clark and received a cool reception from other political leaders.

Broadbent said in Ottawa Monday it's time Parliament adopted a form of proportional representation to ensure the major parties get at least some MPs from all regions of the country.

He said 50 additional MPs should be sent to Parliament — 10 from each of the five regions of the country. Each party would receive a share of the 10 seats in proportion to the popular vote it received in the region.

The system would give the Liberals representatives where they badly need them in the West, would give the Conservatives and NDP more seats in Liberal-held Quebec, and give the NDP some seats in Atlantic Canada, where they were shut out last Monday.

It would increase the number of seats in the Commons to 332 from 282.

A Trudeau spokesman said the prime minister-designate had found the proposal "interesting" but had no intention of moving quickly on any specific proposal. He denied a report in a Toronto newspaper saying Trudeau planned to call a special session of Parliament to deal with the issue.

Trudeau plans to meet the new Parliament shortly after the April 4-6 Easter break.

Speaking in Calgary Monday, B.C.'s NDP leader Dave Barrett said Trudeau should go with the MPs who were elected in the west from the Conservative and NDP parties.

Barrett told the Petroleum Landmen Association. "You in Alberta elected 21 Conservatives, we in British Columbia elected 16 Conservatives and 12 NDP.

"We pay these people good money to represent us and we don't want anyone to represent us other than those we voted for."

Barrett called on Trudeau to consult with Conservative and NDP MPs when dealing with western matters and said he would be guilty of political manipulation if he appointed senators to represent the west.

If Trudeau decides to use the Senate to give Western Canada representation to his new cabinet, he has three main questions to answer: who, how and how many?

All are difficult questions. In the case of who, he must ask himself whether he will select some existing senators or ask someone to retire so he can replace him with somebody more suited to a cabinet post.

In the case of how, he must decide whether to give the new ministers full responsibility for portfolios or only make them what amounts to departmental spokesmen.

In the case of how many, presumably he would need at least one minister representing provinces where he has no MPs, British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

There are several ways a senator could represent the government in Parliament. He could be like Conservative Robert de Cotret who had almost full responsibility for industry, trade and commerce and who, at the same time, was economic development minister, a sort of super portfolio with influence over a wide area.

Or he could be a sort of associate minister, as suggested by Ray Perrault, for years Liberal leader in the chamber. This minister would speak for his department in the Senate but the portfolio would be run by a minister in the elected Commons.

Or he could be a minister of state, responsible for no department but spokesman for the government in certain areas.

If Trudeau does use the Senate he will run into opposition from Broadbent who believes the Senate should be abolished.

In the last Parliament, the Liberals were highly critical of the fact the Conservatives had put de Cotret, a defeated candidate in Ottawa, in the Senate as a minister. They complained on two grounds; de Cotret was not in the Commons to answer questions and the government had used the $930 a month for food and shelter. Their maximum GAIN income would be $700 for an assistance period of under four months and $735 for assistance above the four-month period, leaving shortfalls of $230 and $195 respectively.

For the woman with two children, the report says the 1979 Statistics Canada poverty level is $816 or $113 above their estimated need and $241 above their GAIN income after four months.

The other family lives in poverty at $1,083 a month, says Statistics Canada. The figure is $53 above their estimated need and $248 above their calculated GAIN income after four months.

The report says there is a very strong possibility many GAIN recipients in Greater Vancouver are suffering severe hardships because of the high costs of shelter and utilities.

"Either they move into smaller, unsuitable accommodation (often with overcrowding and increased family stress), or they reduce expenditures on food to subsidize rent."

The report says the changes introduced last April cancelled supplementary payments, meaning the actual average increase in GAIN monies is "far less than the rate changes suggested."

"The April 1979 increase in rates set maximum allowances for shelter and utilities and abolished the shelter surplus system of supplementary grants," the report says.

"Thus, families who cannot find accommodation within the shelter maximum have to pay the difference between that and the actual cost of rent plus utilities out of the support component of their GAIN payment."

Senate to provide a job for a man rejected by electors.

When the matter was raised with Trudeau last week, he said the Liberals had no objection to Tory appointment of Quebecers Jacques Flynn as justice minister and Martial Asselin as foreign aid minister because the Conservatives did not have enough Quebec MPs. But he said they did object to appointment of Ontarian de Cotret because there were other Ontarians who could be invited into the cabinet.

Trudeau has appointed two Manitoba Liberal MPs to survey the western problem and one of them, Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg-Fort Garry), said in Edmonton Monday the entire country will suffer if historical animosity towards Central Canada gets in the way of Alberta's oil-pricing negotiations with Ottawa.

"If we allow old grievances to get in the way, it's going to harm the country," said Axworthy, mentioned as a possible candidate for the energy portfolio.

Axworthy and St. Boniface MP Robert Bockstael were in B.C. during the weekend and Bockstael visited Regina Monday to meet Liberal candidates defeated in Saskatchewan.

In all three provinces, discussions were held on the possibility of increasing Western representation in the cabinet through the Senate.

But Axworthy said his view is that "the elected representative is the key to the system," although a senator could act as an assitant minister in a prominent portfolio.

Bockstael said Saskatchewan Liberals want prime minister-designate Trudeau to appoint two Saskatchewan senators to the cabinet. Although Saskatchewan has its full complement of senators, the government has the constitutional power to make more appointments.

One of the Saskatchewan senators mentioned is Hazen Argue. He and Herb Sparrow were the only Liberal senators present at the meeting.

Bockstael said he and Axworthy will report their findings and recommendations to Trudeau in Ottawa on Wednesday.

In New York, lawyers for the Islamic Republic of Iran filed legal briefs Monday in support of a $56.5-billion damage suit against the deposed shah.

The papers filed on behalf of the Tehran government said Manhattan is the proper forum, based partly on the fact that the deposed monarch was n hospital there when the suit was filed last Nov. 28.

the Soviet Union notice the United States will terminate the existing maritime agreement between the two countries.

Under the agreement, Soviet merchant ships have open access to 40 U.S. ports and last year were permitted to dock at 63 others.

"By closing U.S. ports, we would be imposing an immediate economic sanction of substantial proportions that can be expected to have a dramatic impact on the U.S.S.R.," said Rep. John Breaux, D-La.

In Afghanistan, authorities sealed off sections of Kabul and began mass arrests in an apparent effort to bolster President Babrak Karmal's regime, which has been shaken by violent riots and strikes, reports from the Afghanistan capital said today.

The Kabul officials, backed by thousands of Soviet and Afghan troops, are blocking access to at least two sections of Kabul — Jadeh Maiwan, south of downtown, and Dasht-E-Barchi in the southwest quarter, the reports said.

The strike by Kabul's shopkeepers went into the sixth day today, but most government employees were reported back at work.

The official Radio Kabul claimed Monday that "the citizens of Kabul have returned to their work, and all shops in the city remained open." Western correspondents and diplomats in the Afghan capital said the shopkeepers' strike was continuing and most shops were shuttered.

Nerve bombs stay put

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon announced today that almost 900 nerve gas bombs will be kept in storage at the Rocky Mountain Arsenal in Denver.

That decision cancels a U.S. Army decision in May, 1978 to move the Navy Weteye bombs from the Rocky Mountain arsenal to Tooele army depot, 96 kilometres west of Salt Lake City.

In 1973, the administration of former president Richard Nixon decided to destroy the bombs, but Defence Secretary Harold Brown ordered five years ago that the Weteyes, which contain the deadly nerve agent GB, be kept in the U.S. stockpile.

The new Pentagon announcement said Brown had determined that the Weteye bombs "were required as a deterrent against a significant Soviet chemical warfare threat."

The Pentagon decision follows a disagreement between Colorado and Utah officials. Neither state's leaders want the bombs kept on their territory.

The army delayed the planned move of 896 Weteye bombs last year some were found to have leaked inside their containers.

Eight leaking bombs have been destroyed, leaving 888 in storage.

LSD raid snaps top drug ring

VANCOUVER (CP) — A major drug ring has been broken with the seizure of more than 16,000 tablets of LSD worth about $80,000, RCMP said Monday.

Police said six persons have been arrested and charged with conspiracy to traffic in LSD as the result of an investigation by the RCMP drug squad and Edmonton police between June and December, 1979.

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of a seventh person.

Police said the drug was transported from California to Vancouver, then passed on to Edmonton for distribution to Toronto.

Charged are William Peter Fleishman, 27, Terry Roderick Smith, 26, and Gilbert Scott Martin, 34, all of Vancouver; Frank Drewniak, 25, and Norman James Johnson, 25, both of Edmonton, and Ronald Gregory Wiggins, 33, of the United States.

Killer spill forecast every 8 years

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A controversial report dealing with a possible chlorine disaster is being released to the public by district council, after 16 months under wraps.

The report, prepared in 1978 by Beak Consultants Ltd. of Vancouver, predicts the consequences of a spill at the Hooker Chemicals plant here and discusses the probability of a serious earthquake or major railcar accident spilling toxic gases.

The report predicts a major spill every eight years of 100 to 400 tons of chlorine which could cause as many as 68 deaths and require massive evacuations.

Council voted Monday to make the report available to the public starting today and to sell copies of the report to the public at cost.

A North Shore citizens' group had been pressing for the report to be made public so proper evacuation plans can be made.

On Monday, Hooker invited reporters to tour its plant in an effort to show how safe it is.

However, L.H. Schnurstein, Hooker general manager, said the company does not know in what direction deadly chlorine gas would disperse if a major spill occurred.

Schnurstein said he isn't prepared to comment on whether he agrees with the Beak report.

However, he said earlier Hooker "cannot accept projections which do not take into account our outstanding record of safe operation over 23 years."

Meanwhile, Vancouver Mayor Jack Volrich said after a meeting with Canadian transport commission officials that he expects federal authorities will announce a program within a week to keep dangerous commodities such as chlorine out of Vancouver.

Volrich said he will ask council to approve funds for a joint study with CP Rail, Canadian National Railways and other government agencies, aimed at identifying the risks.

Tory declares

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A 25-year-old refrigeration technician announced Monday he will be a candidate to replace retiring provincial B.C. Conservative leader Vic Stephens.

Dan Donnelly is the first to announce he is seeking the post.

Stephens, who represented Oak Bay as the party's only member, was defeated in last May's provincial election.

Young people hustle air discount vouchers

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP are cracking down on young people who have been hustling CP Air's ticket discount vouchers at Vancouver International Airport.

The Avant Garde vouchers are issued to regular-fare transcontinental passengers and are worth a one-third discount on later flights.

Several young people have been collecting the vouchers from disembarking CP Air passengers and then selling them to other passengers.

CP Air spokesman Jim McKeachie says the airline is not concerned about the practice, so long as no one is harassed.

But RCMP point to a section of regulations governing government airport concessions, which states: "No one can advertise or solicit anything within the airport without the written permission of the minister of transport."

RCMP said people seen asking for or selling the vouchers were warned to stop.

McKeachie said vouchers are transferable.

Gobbler prices up again

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Turkey Marketing Board raised prices for two turkey sizes by another quarter-cent on Monday.

The newest increase came a week after the board raised prices for heavy tom and broiler turkeys also by a quarter-cent.

Vancouver-area processors balked at that increase and for two days refused to kill turkeys. They then appealed the increase to the provincial government-appointed B.C Marketing Board.

The board held an information meeting last weekend and will meet with processors to discuss the increases on Thursday.

According to the federal government's latest poultry marketing report, which runs about two weeks late, B.C. turkey farmers were below Ontario producers by one cent a pound for broilers and by three cents a pound for toms.

For the wholesale market, processors in B.C. were getting about 21 cents a pound more for broiler turkeys than plants in southern Ontario, and about 18 cents a pound more for toms than Ontario processors.

At the retail level broiler turkeys on the Vancouver market ranged from $1.19 to $1.59 a pound and toms between $1.43 and $1.59 a pound, compared with $1.38 a pound for all sizes on the Toronto retail market.

THIN HOUSES have no place in their neighborhood, Point Grey residents of Vancouver say. And if real estate prices make the slivers of land between other lots worth building on, that's too bad — they musn't be allowed to lower the tone of the neighborhood. But Thelma Meeks, who demonstrates in fun how thin her house is, says the thin houses are the only way to shave the soaring prices of housing. Building permits are being sought for some lots which are only 17 feet wide, in a neighborhood where the average lot has a 60-foot frontage.

Former MLA a liar: McKitka

NEW WESTMINSTER, (CP) — A onetime Social Credit MLA who testified former Surrey mayor Ed McKitka asked him for $100,000 in exchange for getting a land use contract was lying, McKitka said in B.C. Supreme Court Monday.

McKitka, who is facing nine criminal charges, testified he was not personally involved in any land transactions while he was mayor and said the accusation was made to discredit him politically.

In earlier testimony, Loewen said McKitka had asked him for the $100,000.

"He is a liar," said McKitka.

McKitka, who is currently a Surrey alderman, said he had a legitimate discussion with Loewen about a proposed new development in Surrey and denied he asked what he would make out of the project.

Instead, McKitka said, Loewen asked him if the former mayor wanted an election camapign contribution. McKitka said he refused the offer.

McKitka also denied he ever attempted to delay Loewen's development project in council.

He agreed he did mention to Loewen the sum of $100,000 but said the amount referred to a question from Loewen about excavation costs.

McKitka denied he ever received funds other than campaign contributions from local developers.

The counts against McKitka include charges that he breached the trust of his office and demanded benefits for disclosing confidential zoning information to developers.

Defence lawyer H. A. D. Oliver told the jury McKitka would attempt to place wiretap evidence gathered by the RCMP from bugs on McKitka's phone in context.

"Now, if one takes conversations like this out of context, it will be obvious that one could prove almost anything," Oliver said.

"The Crown has succeeded in creating a general atmosphere of suspicion but you're not going to convict anyone on the basis of suspicion."

McKitka testified Monday he was joking when he suggested that land developer Joe Beck put up $25,000 so McKitka could buy a Surrey chicken farm.

"I'm a bit of a joker," he said. "In the mayor's office you can either be a stuffed shirt or put a little life into the place. I put life into the place."

McKitka also denied that in 1977 he threatened then Surrey alderman Bill Millar in an attempt to get support for a controversial racetrack proposal.

The trial continues.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bogus American bills have started surfacing in the Vancouver area, the RCMP warned Monday. Cpl. Barry Steineger said about two or three bills a day started showing up last week in $20, $50 and $100 denominations.

Officer acquitted

DELTA (CP) — A Surrey RCMP constable was acquitted Monday of a charge of dangerous driving laid after his police cruiser struck and killed Michael Veralis, 28, of Surrey, driver of another car.

No Jacks verdict

VANCOUVER (CP) — Justice R. P. Anderson reserved decision Monday following completion of arguments in entertainer Terry Jacks' suit against a Vancouver lawyer. Jacks is claiming damages of $290,000 against Andrew R. Davis, alleging the lawyer was in breach of trust in failing to advise him of a $65,000 flip-over profit made by a middleman in an apartment purchase.

CANADA SOCIAL INSURANCE NUMBER STUDY

The Government of Canada has requested that the Privacy Commissioner conduct a study with respect to the use of the Social Insurance Number and the implication of such use for the privacy of individuals.

In particular, the terms of reference of the study are:

1. The Minister of Justice has requested the Privacy Commissioner, and the Privacy Commissioner has agreed, to conduct a study with respect to the use of the Social Insurance Number, and the implications of such use for the privacy of individuals, by:

    a) corporations, organizations and other bodies in the private sector which come within the legislative authority of Parliament; and

    b) institutions in the public sector which come within the legislative authority of Parliament other than those to which the provisions of Part IV of the Canadian Human Rights Act apply.

2. In consultation with provincial governments, the Privacy Commissioner is also to study the use of the Social Insurance Number by provincial and municipal governments and the implications of such use for the privacy of individuals.

3. The Privacy Commissioner in conducting this study is authorized to receive and consider submissions and comments from any source with respect to the use of the Social Insurance Number and the relationship of such use to privacy

4. The study by the Privacy Commissioner is to examine the following matters:

    a) the extent to which the Social Insurance Number is collected and used by those corporations, organizations, institutions, governments and other bodies which are within the scope of this study;

    b) the purposes for which the Social Insurance Number is used;

    c) whether or not the Social Insurance Number is used as a data-linkage device and, if so, the extent and implications of such use;

    d) whether or not the collection and use of the Social Insurance Number represents a threat to the privacy of individuals and, if so, the nature and extent of this threat;

    e) the possible implications of the regulation or prohibition of the collection or use of the Social Insurance Number.

5. The Privacy Commissioner is to advise and make recommendations with respect to the above and in particular is:

    a) to advise and make recommendations with respect to whether or not the collection and use of the Social Insurance Number should be regulated or prohibited;

    b) if so, to advise and make recommendations with respect to the manner in which this should be done, and

    c) to advise and make recommendations with respect to any other matter relating to the collection and use of the Social Insurance Number and the consequential implications for the privacy of individuals.

6. The Privacy Commissioner shall submit her report on the use of the Social Insurance Number to the Minister of Justice.

Interested persons, governments, corporations, organizations and other bodies are invited to provide written briefs, comments and information with respect to any of the matters included in the terms of reference. The Privacy Commissioner has been required to submit a report prior to 1 August, 1980, and no public hearings are contemplated at this time. Briefs and comments should be submitted before 1 May, 1980, to:

Rough justice

Two years ago Ralph Vipond told the board of directors of the Capital Region Association for the Mentally Retarded that the operating deficit incurred by the Langwood Activity Centre couldn't go on indefinitely. As the association's executive director, he reported a $15,000 shortfall between between the provincial government's subsidy and the operating expenses to provide workshop activity to 20 severely mentally handicapped adults.

Since that time overtures to the Ministry of Human Resources for a better funding arrangement have failed. Nevertheless the deficits have been covered through donations from other organizations and individuals.

However, the projected shortfall for 1980 is $33,000, an amount the association feels is impossible to raise from alternate sources. As a result the the association plans to close the Langwood Centre March 31, depriving 20 retarded adults of basic training and social experiences and their parents of six or seven hours a day free from the demands of their children.

The heart of these handicapped persons' dilemma is not only money. It also involves a philosphical attitude the provincial government holds towards workshop activities for retarded adults.

The fact is the province has no policy to provide activity centres for training and developing whatever potential exists in retarded people. It says to non-profit organizations like the CRAMR: if you want to establish such a facility go ahead, and we will provide a minimal subsidy.

That subsidy amounts to 73 cents for every hour a handicapped person spends under instruction at a training centre. The same subsidy is given to approximately 75 workshops in the province which aid physically, emotionally and mentally handicapped people.

Even under this funding arrangement there is a crucial flaw. No account is made of the degree of disability.

Many workshops are able to produce saleable products; the money from which goes, along with the 73 cents per client hour, to maintaining the facility. However, other workshops which deal with the more severely handicapped have no chance of breaking even with what they can produce. The government subsidy doesn't cover costs and as a result alternative funding sources are sought.

The Langwood Centre, because it offers training to the severely mentally handicapped, has no hope of significant production of saleable items. In the eyes of any reasonable person, surely that wouldn't diminish the importance of the these facilities. But apparently it does make a difference to the province. The 73 cents per hour remains uniform. And in the words of Ralph Vipond, such a simple funding policy is rough justice.

A need exists for the provincial government to take responsiblity for a minimum quality of service to be provided to mentally handicapped. This would require block, rather than piecemeal funding, but services would be established where they are needed and funding wouldn't be a constant headache.

But in the absence of such a radical change, surely Human Resources can at least take into account the degree of disability and adjust the exisiting hourly subsidy to a level that more accurately reflects the costs of operation. Langwood for example needs $60,000 for 1980 just to cover salaries of three employees and utility bills. The government's contribution would have been $22,000. It's not a great difference for a wealthy province.

A bridge for the '60s

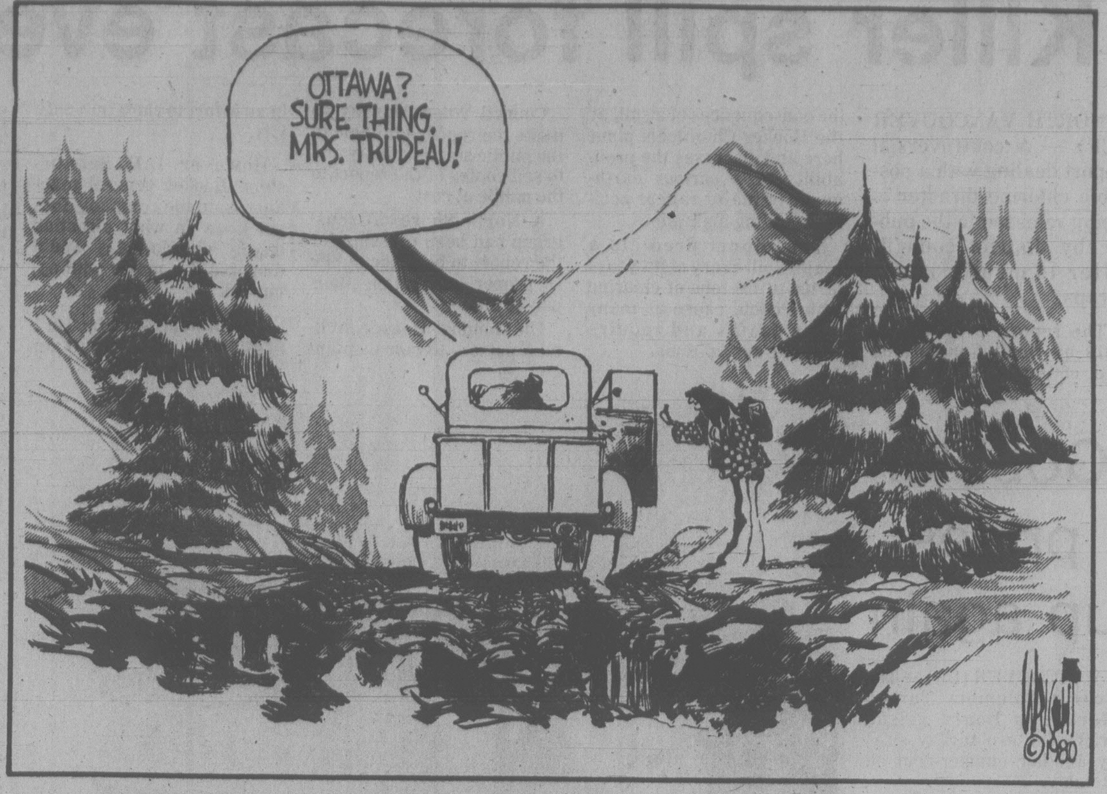
Over the next few years, the provincial government is going to spend at least $60 for every B.C. resident for the purpose of building a new crossing of the Fraser River in Greater Vancouver. The purpose of the $130 million project is to ease the dreadful traffic rushes that occur each day when thousands of commuters from Surrey, Richmond and Delta get in their cars — mostly one person to each car — to drive to work in downtown Vancouver and to drive home again.

The traffic jams are doubtless a problem. Yet it is amazing that in this day of galloping energy prices and probably energy shortages, a government would be proceeding with such an expensive project that caters to nothing but the private automobile.

Probably for a few years after the bridge is completed, four years or so from now, there will still be motorists who can afford the five-dollars-a-gallon or whatever gasoline will then cost. There will still be motorists who won't mind waiting in the likely rationing lines to buy their gasoline.

Surely by then, however, a significant number of British Columbians will have turned to rapid transit and other mass forms of transportation to meet their everyday commuting needs. The new bridge, however, makes no provision at all for rapid transit, for light rail, or for anything except more and more lanes of pavement for cars.

It doesn't make sense. The provincial government should be planning a transportation system for the late 1980s and 1990s. Instead, it is designing a bridge suitable for the 1960s.



OTTAWA? SURE THING, MRS. TRUDEAU!
WRIGHT ©1980

RICHARD GWYN

Higher marks from history

OTTAWA — As he composed himself in his motel room before going down to the Spruce Grove Arena to make his concession speech on election night, Joe Clark turned to his aides and at last gave them the answer they all wanted to hear, but to a question none of them had been able to bring himself to ask.

"Inevitably, there are going to be questions," said Clark. "I've thought about this, and I'm not going."

For Clark's aides, this was the first good news through a long, bleak evening. Their leader had decided to stay, and to fight again another day.

On election night, most commentators described Clark as "finished." He had become, they declared, "a political asterisk," a footnote in the long chronicle of Liberal rule. Perhaps, except that Clark still is writing his own future.

Appealing address

One reason for Clark's decision to stay on and to fight back is obvious enough. He's spent the last nine months at the country's best address — 24 Sussex Drive. After it, for any political leader, but most particularly so for a 40-year-old, no other place is really home.

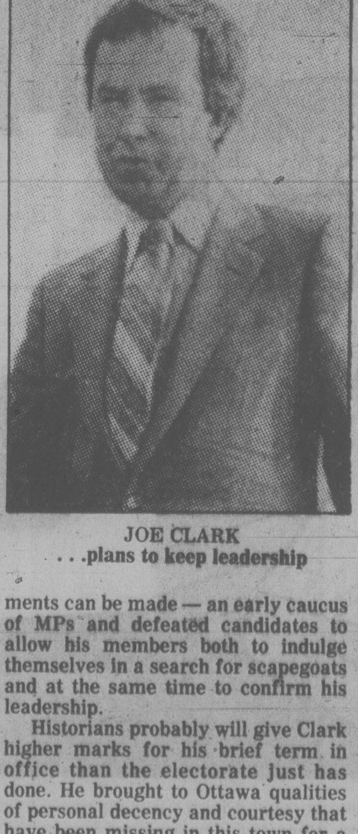
Clark is convinced, as indeed defeated leaders always are, that his policies were right and that, as time passes, voters will recognize that they were wrong. Vindication, for example, came to Robert Stanfield for his policy of wage and price controls, except that by then Stanfield had removed himself beyond the reach of political reward.

The other reason for Clark's decision to stay on is less obvious, but is as important. Besides the spur of self-interest there is the spur of the interest of his party.

In his just-published book, The Tory Syndrome, political scientist George Perlin remarks of the Conservatives, "Electoral defeats contribute to conflict in the party, and conflict in the party contributes to its electoral defeats." The process is circular, and is vicious.

Some signs of viciousness already have appeared. The day after the election, veteran Conservative MP and Party President, Robert Coates, blamed the defeat on a "lousy campaign." At the cabinet's last meeting this week, several ministers accused Finance Minister John Crosbie of causing the loss of a dozen seats in the Maritimes, in Southern Ontario and on the Prairies by his 18 cents a gallon excise tax.

Yet certainly by the party's own past standards, the complaints have been few. To head off others, Clark's plans — this week, if the arrangements can be made — an early caucus of MPs and defeated candidates to allow his members both to indulge themselves in a search for scapegoats and at the same time to confirm his leadership.



JOE CLARK
. . .plans to keep leadership

Historians probably will give Clark higher marks for his brief term in office than the electorate just has done. He brought to Ottawa qualities of personal decency and courtesy that have been missing in this town for a decade. He inspired the civil service to search within itself for fresh ideas, particularly in financial management and in social policy, of which Trudeau now will be the beneficiary. He challenged Canadians to face the truth about our economic condition, and although we rejected his policies we will remember his honesty.

Beyond any doubt, though, historians will give Clark the highest of marks for his term as Conservative leader.

During his first three years, as opposition leader, Clark turned — to face outwards — the famous "firing squads in circles," that Conservatives always have formed amongst themselves. Those who tried to fire upon Clark, as they had upon Stanfield, either disappeared from public view, like Claude Wagner and Stan Schumacher, or, like Jack Horner, quit and were not missed.

Having got his MPs first to discipline themselves, Clark, as prime minister, was able to discipline them himself in ways that Trudeau, for all his dominance, never could bring himself to attempt. Thus, to assemble a cabinet of the best and the brightest available, Clark passed over a dozen veteran MPs who'd all taken for granted they would be allowed their moment of glory. Yet among those — a familiar voice — only Coates complained in public.

Ultimate test

By his decision to stay on as leader, Clark now is putting Conservatives to the ultimate test of their maturity as a political party.

Quite possibly, Clark may have no second chance to change his address to 24 Sussex. If Trudeau indeed does retire before the next election as he has promised, Clark may do the same voluntarily, since to compete with a new Liberal leader the Conservatives would need a new leader themselves.

The next election is too far away to be worth speculating about. For now, it's enough to record that just as Clark, during the campaign, ended the Clark jokes, so has he ended, almost, the Conservative jokes. Combined, those accomplishments already add up to more than a footnote.

DAN TURNER

About-face over 10 years

OTTAWA — Sunday marked an anniversary of sorts for Pierre Elliott Trudeau. It either marked one of the great flip-flops in Canadian political history or brings the sincerity of one of Trudeau's few campaign promises into grave doubt.

On Feb. 24, 1970 the then-and-now-again prime minister stood in front of 400 raucous students at Ottawa's Carleton University and gave them his views on economic nationalism.

To the jeers of a sizeable segment of his audience Trudeau scorned economist Melville Watkins, and deplored the "greatest tendency to be carried away by the territorial imperative."

The nationalists wanted to curb foreign domination of the Canadian economy and cut back on oil and gas sales to the Americans.

Reliable source

On the latter point, Trudeau was contemptuous. Canada's inventory of oil and gas was "reliable," he said.

Canadians were in danger of being "too possessive" about oil and gas. "If we're not going to use them, why not sell them for good, hard cash?"

But, looking back a decade later, it turns out that maybe we could use them, since one quarter of the country's annual oil consumption is now being imported at around $35 a barrel, costing taxpayers a projected $2.7 billion in subsidies for the coming year.

Have the intervening years converted the prime minister into an economic nationalist, seized by the "territorial imperative" he found so laughable 10 years ago?

Nobody would have thought so until the last week of the election campaign, when strange things began to happen.

Having promised the day before in Quebec that the Liberals wouldn't stoop to making any more election promises, Trudeau proceeded to Toronto where he promised — as part of an over-all industrial strategy — that the Foreign Investment Review Agency (FIRA) would be strengthened and its mandate broadened.

Since its establishment in 1974, FIRA has been limited to approving or rejecting foreign-based takeovers of Canadian firms.

The only control it has had over foreign-owned firms already established in Canada has been to approve or reject their expansion into areas completely unrelated to their traditional sphere of activity.

Trudeau said his government would instruct FIRA to monitor all large foreign firms operating in Canada to assess their performance in areas such as export promotion and research and development.

It would also, through government guarantees of bank loans, help provide financial asssistance to Canadian companies that wanted to compete for foreign takeovers or buy back foreign-owned operations in Canada.

Later in the week Trudeau went to Windsor, Ont., where he said his government would be ready to square off against the U.S. government to get Canada a better deal on the U.S.-Canada Auto Pact, which was a Liberal invention designed to ensure that each country would get a fair share of the automotive trade between them.

That it isn't working in Canada's favor seems fairly obvious — in 1979 Canada suffered a $3.1 billion deficit in its trade in autos and auto parts with the United States.

Trudeau slammed his hands on the podium in apparent fury when he pointed out that Canadian-based subsidiaries of the major U.S. automotive firms had contributed $375 million to research and development undertaken in the United States in 1977, compared to the $5 million they spent in Canada.

If these firms did not shape up, he said, his government would "examine the possibility" of limiting the tax-deductibility of the research and development they do outside Canada.

To this point there is no way of knowing whether Trudeau's commitments were meant to be pap or hard-edged proposals.

A government doesn't have to be fiercely nationalistic to "examine the possibility" of punishing bad-acting foreigners, and whether FIRA monitors the behavior of foreign firms doesn't matter much if the government doesn't go after them.

At their most cynical, the proposals may have been designed to do nothing more than swing a few votes away from the NDP during the last week of an election campaign and help win New Democrat support in case of a minority Parliament.

But Liberal insiders claim not — saying that Trudeau has been convinced that the Canadian economy now is "mature" enough for economic nationalism.

Foreign investment, they say, has diminished in importance because much of it is now being used to buy up companies already in operation rather than get into new, job-generating ventures.

If a more aggressive stance towards foreign-owned firms causes problems with Washington, they say, Trudeau is ready to face them.

Party swing

Says one Trudeau aide: "Carter phoning Joe Clark to laud him in the middle of our election campaign was a little much. Half our people on the campaign plane wanted to get off and proceed to New Hampshire" — where Carter is locked in a presidential primary against Edward Kennedy.

Herb Gray, the arch-nationalist of Liberal MPs and author of a critical study of foreign ownership in Canada in the early '70s, was considered so dispensable by Trudeau following the publication of the report that he was dumped from the cabinet in 1974.

Following the Liberal defeat last May, Trudeau exhumed Gray and made him his finance critic, a move which appears to have been the beginning of the party swing towards economic nationalism.

Gray offers himself as a barometer as to how serious Trudeau is about that swing.

The fact alone that Trudeau chose him as financial critic, he says, showed he was serious.

Just how serious may be determined when the prime minister decides which spot he'll give Gray in his new cabinet.

Either of two portfolios — finance or industry, trade and commerce — could well mean Trudeau's 10-year conversion is complete. Anything less may mean that territorial imperative doesn't mean much more to him than it ever has.

Fact and fiction

Recently there was concern in some quarters over the present condition of the Museum Train, which is part of the British Columbia Provincial Museum in Victoria. Now that those interested in making news seem to have run out of fictions, perhaps the facts would be of interest.

Adhering to a plan made in 1974, last fall the museum removed its own exhibits from its own railway cars, doing so under the direction of the craftsman that installed them five years ago. As anyone who knows anything about exhibits of the quality that is part of this museum's good reputation, exhibition floor space left empty between exhibitions is not usually given to an interior decorator to be made pretty for the chance visits of inspectors or tradesmen. The exhibits were made so difficult to remove, and what wood was salvaged went to the workshop in a local prison to be recycled. After a thorough vacuuming, the coaches were shut, and stored in Victoria, certainly not beautiful inside, but ready for new exhibits when they were available.

Some weeks ago Railway Appliances Research Ltd. of Vancouver moved the coaches to Vancouver, acting for another ministry wishing to borrow them. Any small damage done after the cars left Victoria was not done by the museum, and will be repaired as stated in the loan agreement before the coaches are returned.

The Provincial Museum has a solid and we hope well earned reputation for having some success at doing things well. Naturally the museum is concerned over the recent accusations, which have mostly been of the — "When are you going to stop beating your wife?" — variety. We can only speculate that someone is currently high on trains and low on the museum, and wants to manufacture tales of villains while not encumbered by facts, I would assume doing it all to somehow benefit trains. — R. Y. Edwards, Director, B.C. Provincial Museum.

Misplaced blame

The lead story of the Feb. 18 Times can only be classed as irresponsible journalism.

Admittedly, Clark could have delayed the election for a time, but the attempted parallel between Pearson in 1968 and Clark in 1980 is laughable. In Pearson's case, he was out of the country on holiday and when a tax matter was voted on in the House of Commons, there were not enough Liberal MPs to pass the legislation. The important factor is that they potentially had the required number of MPs, but the party whips had been lax in ensuring they all turned out for the vote.

The Clark situation was different. As the FP News Service report states, Clark had to make the political judgement: "Whether the defeat presents a clear issue on which the country should be allowed to make a decision." Clearly, the defeat of the budget as such, was a crucial vote and did reflect a lack of confidence. The Tory governent did not have the numbers required to defeat such a motion, and were Clark to have attempted to hold on to power, I feel the move would have been classed by most as "unconstitutional."

Even if he had followed the Pearson precedent and introduced an expressly worded motion calling for a vote of confidence, the result would surely have been the same, and only fed opposition members with an instrument to use against the Conservatives in the ensuing election.

Clearly, the Liberals and the NDP were aware that the Conservatives were losing support as Canadians became more and more shortsighted. In my mind, they let personal desires interfere with the best interests of Canada.

To blame the election on the Conservatives is tantamount to attributing Canada's high standard of living to the Liberal Party. — David Marsden, Gordon Head Residence, University of Victoria.

Curious

Every Vote Counts: A sound theme, endorsed by the three main party leaders. Is it not curious that our premier, namely Mr. Bennett, could not find it convenient to adjust his vacation schedule so that he could at least place his vote either beforehand or on due date in an election which is most surely going to have a vital effect on the future of Canadians? Perhaps we in British Columbia will remember this when a provincial election is called and those who feel like supporting Mr. Bennett will be absent, or not voting, thus letting the opposition in with a resounding majority. — Stuart Simpson, 110 King George Terrace.

More roads, bridges — do we need them?

Millions for highway to save 40 miles!

By MICHAEL M'GONIGLE

(M'Gonigle is a Victoria lawyer who has been active in environmental affairs, particularly the anti-whaling movement, and is now at the Centre for Law and Social Policy in Washington, D.C.)

The provincial government has recently begun work on a new, half billion dollar highway and already it's out of date. At a time of energy and environmental crises, the expenditure of such a sum without publicity or debate on a highway that is not needed, that will devastate a priceless environment and consume tremendous amounts of energy, is wasteful and cannot be justified. This project must be reconsidered before it is too late.

The Coquihalla is to begin at Hope to supplement the two existing highways — the Fraser Canyon and the Hope-Princeton. It will stretch northeast, through the narrow valley of the Coquihalla River and the open ranching valley of the Coldwater River. This first stage will come out at Merritt. It will cost $250 million.

Over plateau

The second stage takes the freeway up and over the rich Thompson Plateau to Kamloops. No official estimates of the cost of this section are available, but unofficial projections put the price tag at $100-$150 million.

Finally, a third stage might be added from Merritt through the open rangeland of the Douglas Lake area down and into the Okanagan Valley at Peachland. If costs of this section are at all similar, the total expenditure could easily exceed a half billion dollars.

Planning for this additional route began in the late 1960s when traffic was growing on the two existing routes. Foreseeing future congestion, the government began investigating methods to accommodate the growth.

The recent improvements on the existing highways were one result of those investigations. Those are continuing. However, the need for a third route dropped sharply after the 1973 Arab oil embargo brought on a drastic 25 per cent reduction in traffic. The scheme was shelved by the NDP government.

Since 1973, average summer traffic has still not returned to previous levels despite the temporary recreational vehicle boom and three sunny summers since 1976. The probability of still further declines is very high. The fuel crunch has only just begun in Canada, and the Canadian dollar will not always be so cheap and attractive to foreign tourists.

It was therefore a surprise even to highways officials when, in the 1977 throne speech, the government announced that the new route would be built. The department has since worked cooperatively with other ministries but they have been given an unnecessary task and even now enthusiasm for the project is low.

Some work has already been done. By the middle of 1980, one three-mile section costing $4 million will be completed. The remainder of the highway to Merritt will be constructed over the next eight years.

It is still early enough to reconsider the project. It is the duty of the two ministers responsible — Alex Fraser of the department of highways and Tom Waterland of the department of forests — to examine the evidence in a full public review.

In the meantime, while energy and traffic trends and land-use options are considered, construction should stop. As only a small crew of 50 men is involved in the work, that can be done with minimal dislocation. Too much is at stake to continue.

The evidence against the project is easy to discern. Yet the present government, in developing the project, circumvented its own legislation to avoid confronting that evidence.

Under existing legislation, new "linear developments" such as pipelines and highways should be evaluated under strict guidelines. Those guidelines direct that a detailed examination of impacts and options should be concluded before a project is approved and a route chosen.

By introducing the project as an accomplished fact, the government avoided that critical stage in assessment. The decision to build the route was made with no weight being given to the environmental and social costs of the road. No balancing of costs and benefits and no over-all planning were done.

Only after the decision had been made was a study done on the selected route. That was directed by the controversial environment and land use secretariat. Although overshadowed by the decision to go ahead, the report it produced is boldly illuminating. The problems with the highway are legion.

The major problem is, of course, need. The report's forecasts of traffic density in 1986 are based largely on pre-1973 figures. If projections are based on traffic and energy trends since 1973 — trends which are intensifying — the picture is very different.

The only benefit from the major route proposed is the reduction in distance from Hope to Kamloops — a saving of 40 miles. Is that a saving worth $400 million? Is it worth the other costs involved?

The first costs are to the land itself. Throughout the report there are repeated references to "loss of wilderness character" and "decreased esthetics." The road "will allow the side valleys to be used for . . . vehicular recreation (four-wheel drive and snowmobiles)" as well as for hikers.

Rich wilderness

To expose this rich wilderness to a motorized onslaught is to risk the very basis for British Columbia's worldwide fame. As wild, natural spaces decrease and become increasingly sought after, surely we should utilize them carefully (especially so near to Vancouver) and certainly not as an afterthought to yet another highway. These spaces are the province's most valuable resource for all time.

Associated with this destruction of character is the cost to fish and wildlife. The Coquihalla, one of the last southern rivers still sporting a summer steelhead run, will be diverted in three places and encroached upon in seven others. Hazards from this construction are acknowledged to be "high" here, as they are in the Coldwater River, which supports "one of the most important salmon runs in the province."

In addition to the pressures of construction will be the immediate overfishing that will result from exposure to so much uncontrollable traffic. These rivers are already being intensively utilized and are only now beginning to recover from decades of abuse by logging, mining, and pipeline interests.

The plateau still contains healthy populations of fish, deer, moose, mountain goats, and waterfowl, but a new highway would put the area under pressure beyond its natural capacity. The plateau is especially vulnerable to motorized encroachments.

A second major cost that was ignored by the government is the cost to the local people. A freeway might benefit the oil companies en route but at great cost to others.

The ranchers in the Coldwater have already expressed their opposition to the project. Like the ranchers beyond Merritt, they will be profoundly affected.

The report identifies countless problems that a high speed right-of-way will cause for a terrain which is really only suitable for open ranching. In fact, the road will go through a substantial stretch of agricultural reserve land in the process.

So serious are the impacts that it is predicted ranches could quite easily become "uneconomic", with the usual consequence that "in the long term the smaller parcels of land are taken from productive ranching and become hobby farms and residential lots."

A second group that is ignored is the local native population. Not only may the highway slice through the Coldwater reserve, but it will pass by and open up many traditional hunting and sacred areas.

Few British Columbians are aware of the rich cultural heritage that is being buried with the continued disregard of our Indian peoples. The Indians of the Thompson and Okanagan plateaus had, for thousands of years, a highly developed and ecologically balanced society of great wisdom.

That heritage still lingers. Yet at a time of growing cultural reawakening, a new network of superhighways threatens to fragment and deplete this area and bury the culture even deeper, so that it will soon be only a subject for archeologists. That would be a loss to us all.

None of these costs has been considered.

A third loss imposed by the government's precipitous decision is to our ability to plan the future of this invaluable area. If there is one major lesson to be learned from this project, it is that the provincial government lacks an integrated approach to land use planning and a process by which to arrive at one.

Considering the adverse impacts that have been inflicted on the area in the past and the mounting pressures of the future, it is timely now to undertake a comprehensive and public review, one that is not predetermined by the inevitability of another superhighway.

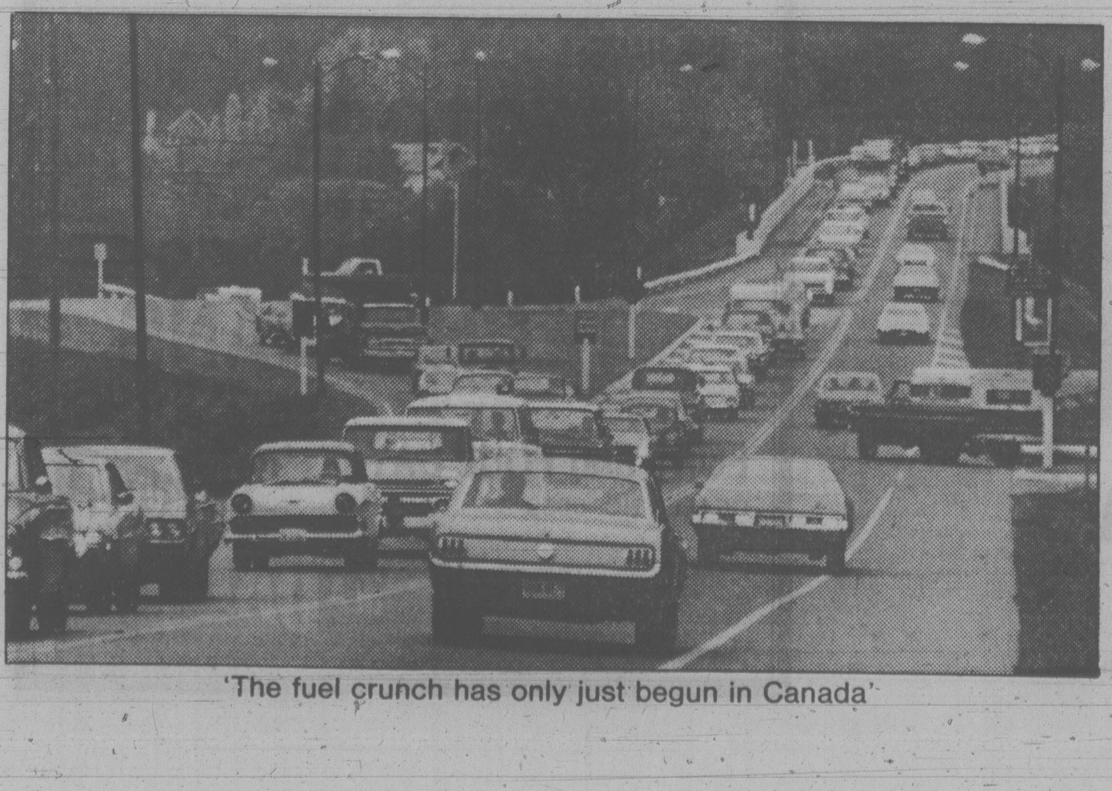
Ranchers, native people, wildlife groups, sportsmen, environmentalists and citizens generally are all affected by this unilateral decision and they deserve to be heard. Only then can fair and enlightened decisions be made.

If carefully managed, this area's potential as a large-scale and diversified resource/recreational area for British Columbians and for tourists is enormous. What is desired is development that preserves and enhances the character of the land, is labor, not energy intensive, attracts clean investment, and anticipates the needs of the future.

Only after such an evaluation should transportation needs and options be addressed. To be justified, this new superhighway would need to generate new traffic, thus putting more pressure on our dwindling energy supplies and crowded cities. For example, continuing the highway into the Okanagan can only mean more congestion, bigger roads, and a less livable Okanagan Valley.

New developments should solve problems, not create them. A public inquiry could examine those questions and evaluate alternatives. It must reflect the cost that the energy, resource, and environmental crisis will impose. These cannot be avoided, but they can overwhelm us by default.

The politicians that history thanks are those with vision. Many political decisions posed by the tightening constraints of our time are difficult. The decision to reconsider this highway is not.



'The fuel crunch has only just begun in Canada'

Socred car dealers giving us more of same

By MARJORIE NICHOLS
The Vancouver Sun

The edifice complex lives on. A suntanned Bill Bennett winged in from Hawaii Friday and, as is his post-vacation wont, unveiled plans for yet another outmoded steel-and-concrete monument.

Last month it was a stadium. This month it is a bridge. To be precise, a $130 million bridge over the Fraser River at Annacis Island, to cart the commuters in their gas-guzzlers.

If this were 1965, Mr. Bennett could be applauded for his foresight and practical employment of public funds for the greater good of working stiffs of all rank and station.

Trouble is that this is now the year of our Lord 1980 and bridges for automobiles are out of fashion. The challenge is not supposed to be finding new ways to transport automobiles but to transport people.

No doubt about it, this proposed bridge will enjoy short-term popularity among the voting commuters who now develop ulcers dealing with the daily traffic problems posed by the Lower Mainland's inadequate bridging system.

Even by the time 1983 and the next election rolls around there will still be car drivers rich enough to buy the $5-a-gallon gasoline and sufficiently grateful to vote Social Credit.

But it represents an abdication by Mr. Bennett and his government of their responsibility to deal realistically with the energy issue. Perhaps the most insightful observations made to date about this government's recent energy policy were those of David Anderson, former provincial Liberal leader.

Mr. Anderson, who was among the invited guests at the unveiling of the dismal policy three weeks ago, said it was "a great, forward-thinking policy — for the 1970s."

The former Liberal leader had to stuff a serviette in his mouth to keep from disrupting proceedings as Energy Minister Bob McClelland proudly announced the province's new plan to purchase smaller cars.

"If this were 1970 that might be classified as a really novel idea," said Mr. Anderson, "but don't these people understand that everyone else is now selling their small cars and going to bicycles?"

The answer is apparently not. It is probably unfair to fault the premier personally for this woeful lack of understanding of what is happening on the other side of the mountains and elsewhere in the real world.

Mr. Bennett, like quite a few of the rest of us, is an affluent individual from a small town where the automobile is the mode of communication as well as transportation. In such an environment, separation from one's wheels is regarded as the moral equivalent of emasculation. Had the premier had an opportunity to live and work in a big city with efficient public transport he probably wouldn't be building bridges.

Had he ever sat in a gas rationing line that stretched a couple of miles he might also have second thoughts about the expenditure of any further public funds to encourage automobile addition. Still, it is not the premier who is to blame, but the experts on the public payroll who keep giving him this lousy advice.

It really is ironic. Here is B.C. busting its buttons in an effort to be selected as host for a 1986 prestigious international transportation conference and we're still building bridges for cars. That won't impress even the delegates from Upper Volta.

What B.C. should be doing is launching some bold initiatives in the area of public transportation. A mere couple of hundred million wouldn't produce more than a couple of blocks of subway at today's costs, but it would finance a start on something imaginative — like a monorail or even a commuter train from the bedrooms of the Lower Mainland.

Delta MLA Walter Davidson had threatened to resign if the government failed to commit itself to this bridge. What can you say except that $130 million of other people's money seems a bit pricey for one vote, even for a government with a working majority of four.

No, if it comes down to a choice between Walter and the bridge, it's Walter who must go.

In a way, this silly bridge is symptomatic of a lot that is wrong with Mr. Bennett's government. On the basis of its deeds, it appears to be a collective dedicated to the proposition that good government is a financial function of fealty to the lowest common denominator.

Youth club funds eyed

The Langford Boys and Girls Club will likely get the funding it wants but from a different source and with some strings attached.

The club earlier this year asked the Juan de Fuca Recreation Commission for money to hire additional staff and increase its programs for youngsters and teenagers in Colwood and Langford and possibly Metchosin.

But the recreation commission said it isn't the body to supply such funding.

The three regional directors for the areas have agreed in principle to apply to the provincial government for funding from the grants-in-aid program that is available for recreation projects in unorganized areas.

But Colwood director and commission chairman Howard Drummond said there will be strings attached.

Drummond said the money can't be used to hire staff because it's intended as a one-time effort rather than to establish an on-going project.

Directors will also want to take a close look at any capital projects the club proposes for the funding, he said, and details of the agreement would have to be worked out.

The club currently has two main objectives that require funding during the next year, says club worker Dena Blatchford.

It wants to expand the programs it offers in the western community and it wants to have a permanent home, she said.

Blatchford is working on a project to improve the basement of the Langford Legion building on Station Road so it can be used as a clubhouse and money from the grants-in-aid program might be useful for that project.

But, she said, the club already has an application in for capital funds for the work.

Alaska gold strike

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Significant amounts of gold and other minerals have been discovered in an unexplored river basin about 264 kilometres northeast of Anchorage, a state agency said Monday.

State geologist Ross Schaff said samples taken in the Nelchina River basin last August indicate "unusual anomalies of lead, zinc, copper, silver and gold" in amounts that show potential for development.

The exact location of the find will be in a report to be released today.

In the report, miners also will be told the area's mineral concentrations, the quality of assays produced so far and other aspects of the area's general geology.

Claims on the area will be accepted on a first-come, first-serve basis at the district recording office in Palmer.

News of the discovery apparently leaked out during a state budget hearing.

Sidney struggles to keep obstetrics

Sidney council and Capital Region District hospital planners clashed Monday night over a proposal to remove obstetric services from Saanich Peninsula Hospital on Mount Newton Crossroad.

Regional hospital planner Murray Halkett said the services should be moved to the new Hemlcken Road hospital when it opens in 1982 because it will provide better medical care for high-risk cases.

Halkett said the inconvenience is a small price to pay to minimize the chance of brain damage or other problems developing in such cases.

But council, led by Mayor Norma Sealey, opposed the plan.

Sealey said the level of care provided at the peninsual hospital is superior in some respects to Victoria hospitals.

She said the hospital is warm, family-like, and convenient for local people.

Sealey said she doesn't accept Halkett's contention that high-risk infants might be placed in jeopardy.

Halkett was playing on emotions, she said.

"It unfairly suggests that someone who doesn't go along with (the plan) will be somehow responsible for brain-damaged children."

In the past two years there have been about 300 births at the hospital and no deaths.

The mortality rate at all hospitals in the area is seven per 1,000 live births.

Planner-opposed shops approved

Saanich council Monday approved rezoning for a medium-sized shopping centre at Kismer and Broadmead against the advice of chief planner Gil Laurenson.

Laurenson recommended the land, near Shelbourne and Cedar Hill Crossroad, be used for apartments because there are enough shopping centres in the area.

At the public hearing, former Saanich alderman Ian Cass called for an end to commercial-retail development along the northern end of Shelbourne.

Ald. Robert Cameron warned uncontrolled development along Shelbourne would turn the area into one like Kingsway in Vancouver.

Jobless hits 6.1%

LONDON (Reuter) — Unemployment in Britain rose to 1,488,923 this month, 6.1 per cent of the work force, government statistics released today show.

The February increase of 18,352 jobless appeared to be partly due to the effects of the current strike in the state-owned steel industry.

It was the fifth consecutive monthly rise, a trend which some labor leaders blame on the government's policy of cutting public spending.

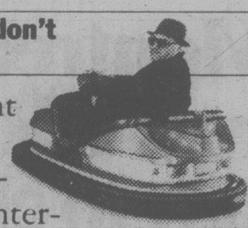
ROYAL TRUST GUIDES YOU AROUND THE BUMPS.

We show you mistakes to watch out for.

Everyone agrees that RRSP's are one of the very best ways to increase retirement income and reduce current income taxes. But not everyone knows about the little RRSP mistakes that can reduce that income.

We do. Here are some of the more obvious ones. Our free booklet will help you understand more about RRSP's and how they work.

Steer clear of places that don't offer a full range of plans.



There are different kinds of RRSP's, providing various combinations of security, interest earnings and flexibility. Royal Trust offers a unique range of six plans. Our booklet and good advice will give you a clear picture of how your choice of plans today will benefit you at retirement, or even in a few years' time.

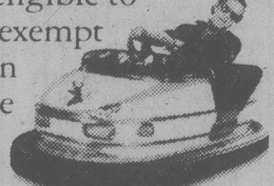
Dodge the misuse of cash. Borrowing your RRSP money may be the wiser way.

Say you have money set aside for your RRSP, yet at the same time, you're planning a loan for some other major purchase. That could be a mistake...you may be wiser to use your cash for that purchase, and borrow the money for your RRSP.

You see, Royal Trust offers Tax Saver Loans for RRSP's, and they have one big advantage: Interest payments on Tax Saver Loans (except for loans taken for spousal RRSP's) are tax deductible in the year they're paid...so tax savings can offset a portion of your interest costs. In short, you could be well ahead.

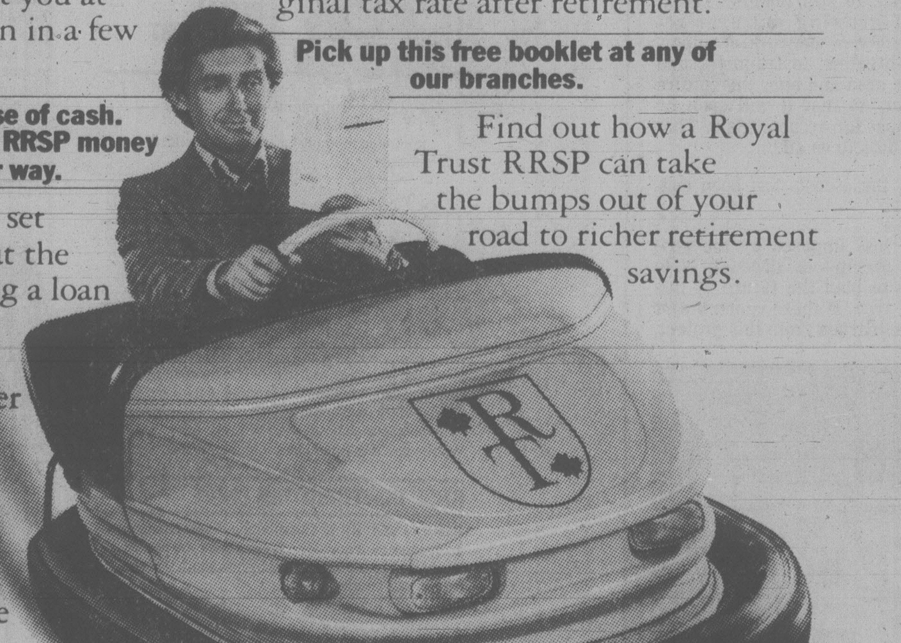
Don't dent your retirement income by putting all your deposits in your own RRSP, when maybe you should contribute to a plan in the name of your spouse.

This can often earn you the same tax advantages today while gaining you some very valuable future tax savings when the retirement income is received.



For instance, if you both have plans, then you'll both be eligible to receive the first $1,000 tax exempt each year when you draw on them for retirement income after age 65. Further, it often makes sense to build retirement income in the name of the person expecting the lower marginal tax rate after retirement.

Pick up this free booklet at any of our branches.



Find out how a Royal Trust RRSP can take the bumps out of your road to richer retirement savings.

Parents seek say in hiring of principal

Parents of Oak Bay Secondary students urged district trustees Monday to let them help select a new principal.

The board was partially receptive and referred the idea to its personnel committee.

Principal D.G. Macdonald retires in June and Oak Bay School Parents Advisory Committee suggested parental involvement in choosing his successor would be feasible and useful.

"The world is changing. If you don't involve them this year, you're going to do it next," district superintendent Alan Stables told trustees.

He said the role of parents in schools must progress beyond raising funds by selling hotdogs.

Greater Victoria Teachers Association president Trevor Calkins said although teachers do not have a position on the subject, they do favor wherever possible the involvement of parents in schools.

If the suggestion is carried through to its ultimate, he saw the risk of problems developing, but also the possibility of greater teacher involvement in the selection of principals.

The GVTA does have representation, along with trustees and administrators, on committees for selection of candidates from which principals are chosen. But the board alone decides on which principals go where.

Robin P. Riddihough, president of the Oak Bay parent advisory committee, noted the board's growing recognition of parent and community input into school affairs, and asked for reaction to direct parent input during the selection of principals.

Riddihough said his committee can offer the new Oak Bay principal valuable liaison with the community.

Calkins favored the idea as long as the parent did not become the sole or major input in selection.

Bigger trustee role urged in evaluation

Greater Victoria school board should play a bigger role in assessing the performance of senior administrators starting this year, Trustee Martin Levin said Monday.

He served notice of motion that the district superintendent should prepare policy and procedures to involve the board in evaluation of its senior management staff, a role confined at present to the superintendent alone.

Levin said the move is part of an attempt to evaluate the administrative processes in District 61, to help provide personnel in which the board can put its confidence.

Trustee Mark Fisher objected to the idea, saying he doesn't believe the board has the competence for evaluation. That's a role the senior administrator should perform, he said.

Levin replied trustees should oversee the administration to ensure that policies being interpreted follow the board's intent. He also said the superintendent thinks the process is long overdue.

Fisher challenged Levin to state two criteria on which the board is competent to judge.

Levin fielded that by suggesting the process would start with a statement of objectives set out annually by the superintendent and be referred to a sub-committee before coming to the board.

Teachers paid to learn French

School trustees decided Monday Greater Victoria elementary teachers will get an honorarium of $5 an hour to learn basic French outside of classroom time.

The arrangement will enable teachers to learn the French required for the basic French program to be taught throughout the district.

It is estimated about 20 minutes a day will be necessary to give teachers the elements they need and the honorarium will cost no more than hiring substitutes to fill in if regular teachers took the lessons during their normal day.

But Trustee Mark Fisher described the plan as disgusting.

He said all teachers should have the professional skills required of them and should update themselves to meet their teaching responsibilities.

And Trustee Lavinia Greenwood feared it will set a precedent by according teachers special treatment.

Those teachers who want to learn more about other subjects might demand equal treatment, she suggested.

Trustee John Young said while Greenwood had a point, French is a special case.

He said many teachers when hired were unaware they would be required to teach French.

A number of French specialists, regular teachers with ability in French, or supernumerary teachers will be available to assist the elementary teacher who cannot handle French.

Board hiring cuts contracting out

More tradesmen will be hired by School District 61 to perform part of the major construction work previously contracted out.

Of $8.9 million in capital undertakings allowed for in the 1980 budget, trustees decided Monday to keep $2.7 million for the district's own maintenance department.

Previous policy confined capital work to jobs valued at less than $20,000, while the new proposal would allow school employees to perform work of $150,000 maximum value.

The decision translates into seven full-time staff and about 46 tradesmen hired for varying periods within the proposed two-year program.

Early in 1978 the board dismissed 57 employees at a time when little construction work was being done and outside contractors were getting work by public tender.

Secretary-treasurer Carl Warner told trustees current staff is torn between essential maintenance work and minor capital projects and is unable to handle the whole workload.

The addition of staff will provide the ability to accomplish more and allow for projects to meet completion deadlines without affecting regular maintenance, the board was told.

Ex-candidate highest for lot

Victoria May Gains, an unsuccessful aldermanic candidate in last fall's election, emerged a winner Monday when Esquimalt council opened seven tenders for a municipally-owned lot on Rockcrest Avenue.

Along with her husband, she was the highest bidder at $35,100 for the single-family dwelling lot.

The CIA plots financial field day

By AB KENT

Five classmates at Central Junior Secondary School are members of the CIA and have plotted a killing for nearly five months.

The four boys and a girl are founders of an exclusive extracurricular group — CIA for Central Investors' Association — and they hope their killing will be in the stock market.

The Grade 10 club started last fall with $50,000 credit to trade on Vancouver Stock Exchange.

So far in an informal after-school relationship they have turned a "profit" of $5,845 and increased their asset value by $19,765 to $69,765.

Not a bad performance for youngsters who last summer didn't know a net asset from a hole in the ground.

And they were astute enough to buy gold stocks before the recent bullion spiral topped out, making $1 a share on a mining issue in October.

"We kicked ourselves because we could have made a lot more," said Rick Schumaker, spokesman for the club.

(That stock, then trading around $5, is now quoted at $7.50.)

Their initial stake, portfolio and market transactions, of course, are all hypothetical. But the group is aiming at a real cash prize of $500 put up by the VSE for the school team that shows the biggest gain on its initial $50,000 by mid-March.

Tobias Louie is president of CIA, and his other members are Lisa Mountain, Colin Leslie and Greg Russell.

Collectively they are conservative investors despite the fact they are trading in a speculative market.

There were 77 participating secondary school teams around the province when the investment program sponsored by the exchange opened last fall.

One of the conditions was that each team would submit an essay on the role of the stock exchange in B.C.'s economy. More than 40 dropped out when they failed to turn in their assignment, but Central is among those remaining and was rated in 12th place by the VSE computer at Jan. 31.

Teacher Paul Condon, who sat in on CIA's investment deliberations, said he kept his advice to a minimum. They made all their own decisions on what stocks to buy, how much of each and when to sell.

"It was their show. They've done it themselves," he said.

"They're pretty bright kids, pretty astute."

If he influenced the team at all, he said, it was probably through his social studies classes in which he stressed the economics of Canadian natural resources.

In any case, CIA decided to invest heavily in mines, but left untouched a generous cash deposit in case the nearly $20,000 portfolio failed to appreciate.

The group didn't want to keep a stock too long and by January had turned everything over once. Current standing in the portfolio's seven stocks shows gains for all. They are:

Eagle River Mines (1,000 shares); Silver Tusk Mines (10,000); Sheba Copper (50,000); Galaxy City Mines (10,000); Norex Resources, Ice Station Resources, and Initial Developments Ltd. (1,000 each).

Sometimes the method of choosing a stock departed from rational assessment.

"We often did it by the name, if we liked the name," Colin said.

Tobias and Greg enjoyed the exercise and show signs of wanting to become market speculators.

"I'd be very conservative if I were using my own money," said Rick. "I'd just use the money I'd made so far. Cut my losses, like at Las Vegas."

Condon asked if they would actually invest their own money.

"Not unless I had 50 grand," Rick replied.

What had they learned?

"Without the stock exchange the U.S. and Canada would fall apart. We base everything on the stock exchange," he said.

How did Condon assess CIA?

"I was a little disappointed they sat on that cash. But kids their age are pretty conservative."

TOWN TALK

Portions of Saturday night's Western Hockey League game at Memorial Arena between Regina Pats and Victoria, which the Cougars won 3-1, are scheduled to be televised nationally in the U.S. in April.

A crew from NBC shot the game and the highlights will be shown on a Prime Time episode featuring junior hockey.

And while the players were unaware of it, they may have second thoughts about some of their choice of language used in "discussions."

Referee Joe Wensink was wired for sound.

An American innkeeper has shown his gratitude for Canada's role in rescuing six Americans from Tehran.

Wade Parker runs the North Motel in Medford, Ore., and vowed he would give the first Canadians passing through free accommodation.

It happened last weekend when Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Daly, 1640 Earlston, stayed overnight at the North Motel on their way home from Laguna Beach, Calif.

In the outpouring of American gratitude over the same episode, Lieut.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving received a special valentine for the whole province.

It came in an envelope addressed: "C/o the Lieutenant-Governor of B.C., for the People of Canada, Victoria, B.C." Inside was a card with the message: "I love you," and a note: "I want to thank you for what you have done for some of my fellow Americans in Iran. I am not surprised, but I am very happy about it."

The message came from Mrs. E.E. Bruhn of Portland.

Former Saanich alderman Joe Bourque has a taste for good things.

He successfully identified half a dozen imported wines — French, Italian and one Australian — to beat 11 competitors and win the B.C. finals of the Opimian Society's wine-tasting competition.

The win gives him a berth in the Canadian championships in Edmonton later this year.

Dr. Robert Malpass of Victoria and Mrs. Pamela Tucker of Vancouver were tied for second place in the annual event.

Sure, and it would be a big emerald green Pacific Western Airlines bird we were seeing at Victoria International Airport?

But surely that emerald (some would say bilious) green shade belongs to Aer Lingus, the Irish national flying service.

A call to PWA's local office was in order to check reports that they had a green plane at Victoria airport.

Town Talk was greeted by laughter from the woman who answered the phone. After a few seconds more hilarity, she regained her voice and asked: "Has it got pink elephants on it, too?"

She broke up again, convulsed by her own great wit.

Finally, from Ruth Cowan, PWA's regional public relations manager, came the explanation.

It seems the big green bird was leased nine months ago from Aer Lingus, and it's been all over the company's western Canadian routes.

"We didn't do a complete job of painting it, as it's going back to Aer Lingus on April 1," Cowan said.

The Aer Lingus name was painted out, but the upper part of the plane and the tail stayed green. To do a complete job would have taken another three days and the plane was badly needed on the system.

After STAR WARS comes CAR WARS. Sorry, make that CAR-WARE.

That's the name of a new group of government snoops set up to keep an eye on the grease-pit set.

This new watchdog for the automotive repair business will work to improve the industry while examining recurring patterns of complaints and assessing unusual cases.

The consumer affairs ministry also will continue its program of "test-shopping" in garages suspected of dishonesty or incompetence.

The ministry dealt with 2,107 complaints about vehicle repairs in 1979, almost 30 per cent of all complaints received.

A Town Talk salute to one of Canada's best-known and best-loved soldiers, Major-General George Pearkes, VC, who's 92 today.

The former lieutenant-governor and his wife, Blytha, marked the occasion at their Tattersall Drive home.

The Western Community Navy League and the Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps at Langford, which it sponsors, is $1,349 richer thanks to 300 Maritimers serving with the Canadian armed forces on this coast.

The Maritimers gathered at the Langford branch of the Royal Canadian Legion for the Second Annual East Coast Reunion, organized by PO Sandy MacDonald.

Wearing gumboots and rolled-down waders, they spent the evening dancing down-home jigs, lancers and just plain old stomps, dining on fish chowder and salmon.

The proceeds were earmarked for the Langford corps which is one year old. A huge cheque, fittingly inscribed with a lobster, was presented to AW Karen Nielson and AC Shawn Emsley by MacDonald. Also taking part in the ceremony were Rear-Admiral Michael Martin, commander maritime forces Pacific; WCNL president Don Jackson and WCNL vice-president CPO Bill Greig.

The further away from the event, the more some people want to relive it.

That's the reunion syndrome, manifest this week in a call to former students of St. Thomas Aquina High School in North Vancouver.

These nostalgia buffs are celebrating their 20th anniversary with a dinner and dance May 18, and are putting the word out early in order to reach as many former students as possible.

Interested persons are asked to write Patti Martin, president of the STA Alumni Association, 541 West Keith Road, North Vancouver, V7M 1M5, or call 112-987-4431.

Dump-Purdy talk from arts groups

By NORMAN GIDNEY

PURDY
. . . meeting Friday

Professional arts groups — unanimous Monday in their condemnation of a report on cultural funding — are now talking about dumping its principal author, Allan Purdy.

Belfry theatre general manager John Linfield said today the Professional Arts Council formed a united front Monday to protest the report by the cultural funding advisory subcommittee, chaired by Purdy.

He said Purdy agreed to meet Friday with several representatives of the council, which has members from all the professional arts organizations in Victoria, to talk about the report's criticism of some groups' top-heavy administration.

Asked about reports that they would try to have Purdy sacked from his voluntary, unpaid position, Linfield said: "It was not specifically discussed but obviously it remains an option."

And another source close to the Victoria Symphony Society said it too is considering asking that Purdy resign.

However, council chairman Eric Macdonald, who manages the Bastion Theatre, was pouring oil on troubled waters.

He said after a careful reading of the report Monday night: "I can't see what all the fuss is about. I found a lot of it to be positive and honorable in tone."

But he acknowledged that "we have a lot of members who are very hot under the collar."

As chairman of the council, he insisted that the meeting with Purdy steer away from any inflammatory remarks and deal with the specific recommendations.

He also issued a conciliatory statement which stopped well short of the angry reactions from other administrators last week.

"I am looking forward to exploring the report with the advisory subcommittee and examining it in a constructive way," it said.

Ald. Ron McKenzie of Victoria, who is chairman of the parent intermunicipal committee which appointed Purdy and the five other members of the subcommittee, said he supported their report.

"These were six very, very highly qualified people from the cultural community," he said.

"I think the report was an excellent report. I know a lot of work went into it. I am very supportive."

He said arts groups had overlooked the main thrust — that the recommendations were made for their benefit.

"If they could look at the report constructively they would find there would be an improvement, first in their financial capability and second in their administrative capability.

"This report wasn't brought forward in a negative or detrimental way."

Having a subcommittee of people with experience in the arts make recommendations on municipal grants is a vast improvement over past practice, McKenzie said.

"It allows the politicians to act with expert knowledge."

Before the Purdy subcommittee was established last year, politicians were making decisions without knowing much about the cultural organizations which were asking for money, he said.

SPCA checking Mill Bay shelter

The B.C. Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is looking into the operations and conditions of the Good Shepherd animal shelter at Mill Bay.

Executive director Al Hickey said Monday an appraisal will be made with the help of a veterinarian from outside the Cowichan Valley area.

The action follows recent complaints about the quality of care given animals at the shelter which was founded nearly 20 years ago by a group of Benedictine nuns.

Hickey said once the appraisal is completed, the society will request a meeting with the shelter's board of directors.

Mann torpedoed by cohorts

Metro plan fails to get single supporter

Esquimalt alderman Larry Mann's proposal for metropolitan government in Greater Victoria was flatly rejected Monday by his own council.

His recommendation for a ward system of metro came under fire by alderman after alderman.

His "discussion paper," Municipal Government for Greater Victoria in the Eighties, contends metro government would save money.

Leading the assault, Mayor Ken Hill said Esquimalt is efficiently run and the taxpayers know it.

"Many of the residents have come to me to say 'we don't want it' (a metropolitan council with representation by wards). We're happy with what we have," Hill said.

The mayor questioned whether a metropolitan council would be as responsive to residents, and Ald. Colin Blair said that under Mann's arrangement Esquimalt would be limited to one representative who would have to be shared with Victoria West.

Ald. Jim McEvay questioned whether other councils would agree to such a system.

"Each municipality has reasons for staying the way it is now," he said.

Ald. Barry Gilbert commended the proposal's cost-saving aspect but said there was no indication that Esquimalt taxpayers favored eliminating the present system just to save money.

Council voted to receive Mann's report with thanks but took no action on it.

Freshman alderman Darwin Robinson even declined to go along with the thanks. He agreed with the mayor that the report should have been vetted by council before Mann went public last week.

In other business, council withdrew its earlier opposition to an application by Paxxon Marketing Corporation to offer its five-unit condominium at 730 Sea Terrace on a time-sharing basis. The condominium, which straddles the city border, was built under a land-use contract.

Council changed its position after receiving legal advice that its land-use contract with the developer does not necessarily disallow multiple ownership of the suites.

Mann and Ald. Robert Jones warned council it "would open the flood gates" for similar use of other properties in the municipality if council did not oppose the shared ownership.

The mayor noted that Esquimalt and the city solicitor, author of the land-use contract, doubted that council could successfully oppose in court the developer's proposed use for the building.

today's markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market rose sharply in active mid-afternoon trading today.

Trading in shares of Placer Development Ltd. was halted at 1:25 p.m. The stock last traded at $66⅝.

Placer said it plans a three-for-one stock split subject to shareholders' approval May 6. The company has also raised its quarterly dividend to 45 cents from 25 cents, payable March 31 to shareholders of record March 18.

Among industrials, Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas rose 9 to $146, Bow Valley Industries 4⅜ to $62¼, Gulf Canada 2½ to $176, BP Canada 1¾ to $50½ and Canadian Tire ⅞ to $27⅞.

Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were up in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume at 10:54 a.m. PST was 4,767,604 shares.

Of the stocks that traded, 203 advanced, 162 declined and 168 remained steady.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led trading in the industrials, remaining steady at $8 on 71,407 shares and Taro Industries dropped .07 to $5⅛ on 17,300. Webb and Knapp Ltd. remained unchanged at $2.60 on 5,000 and Computrex Centres held at .29 on 5,000. Ardiem Industrial Corp. remained steady at .23 and Potter Distillers A remained steady at $1.35.

On the resource and development board, United Hearne Resources dropped ¼ to $11½ on 155,550 shares and Amer Flourite slipped .30 to $7.65 on 115,000. Banner Resources Warrants remained unchanged at $1.05 on 91,500 and Great Northern Pete fell .05 to $1.40 on 91,200. Amflo Petroleum lost $1.25 to $7.50 and Banner Resources dropped .10 to $4.30.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed, drifting sluggishly after a two-week slide.

Analysts said traders seemed to be waiting cautiously for some word of the U.S. government's possible response to the recent acceleration of the inflation rate.

President Carter said Monday that inflation had reached a "crisis stage." Treasury Secretary G. William Miller confirmed Tuesday that the administration was considering new measures aimed at combatting it.

But no announcements were expected until the completion of New Hampshire primary Tuesday.

Some oil stocks attracted buying interest after a setback on Monday. Texaco ½ to $40 and led the active list; Gulf Oil gained ⅞ to $50¾, and Mobil rose 1⅝ to $76⅞.

The NYSE's composite index picked up 0.18 to 64.97.

Volume totalled 28.43 million shares two hours before the close.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market was mixed near the close of light trading.

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 453.6, down 0.1

Industrials were mixed and oils eased on profit-taking.

Canadian shares declined.

Francana merger completed

CALGARY (CP) — Francana Oil and Gas Ltd. and Canadian Merrill Ltd. have announced that they have completed the transfer of Merrill's business to Francana and the election of Merrill directors to the Francana board.

The formal transfer of business at a Francana board meeting followed a decision by the Quebec Superior Court Tuesday denying an application by some Merrill shareholders for an injunction to restrain the merger.

Francana said Merrill shareholders have until March 28 to obtain 1.9 Francana shares for each Merrill share.

Auto parts boom expected

TORONTO (CP) — Sales of Canadian automotive parts are expected to increase by almost $100 million in the next three years as a result of an agreement between the federal government and four foreign auto producers, the Automotive Parts Manufacturers' Association of Canada has announced.

The association said in a release the Governor in Council has passed an order giving remission of duty to the foreign producers in exchange for buying Canadian-made auto parts.

The producers are Nissan Motor Co. Ltd. of Japan, Fiat Auto S.P.A. of Italy, BMW and Daimler-Benz AG, both of West Germany.

Patrick Lavelle, president of the parts manufacturers' association, said in an interview the duty remission order means that "when a part is purchased by a foreign producer and shipped out of the country, the value of that part is deducted from the import value of the vehicle coming into Canada and duty is assessed on the lowered value of the vehicle."

The duty remission order is patterned after a similar order applied two years ago to Volkswagen AG of West Germany. The order has increased the value of Canadian parts bought by Volkswagen since then by about $60 million, the association said.

Lavelle said the expanded duty remission scheme will give Canadian parts manufacturers their first significant breakthrough in marketing auto parts in Japan.

The association said several other foreign vehicle producers are negotiating with Ottawa to participate in the duty remission scheme and it is expected that by the end of 1980, most foreign vehicle producers marketing vehicles in Canada will be taking part.

Further benefits to Canadian parts producers will come as the assemblers establish plants in North America, the association said.

Weyerhaeuser investing $5M

MERRITT, B.C. (CP) — Weyerhaeuser Canada Ltd. has announced plans for a $5 million project to consolidate and modernize its two sawmills in this Interior community.

Henry Christianson, manager of the company's Merritt Wood Products Branch, said the present B mill, which produces primarily two-by-four studs, will be shut down and the A mill, which produced random-length lumber in various dimensions and grades, will be modified.

He said the project will result in better utilization of logs, improvements in working conditions and significant energy savings.

"We'll get better recovery from the same volume of raw material, we'll be more competitive in the North American market, and that will make each employee's job that much more secure," he said.

Christianson estimated wood recovery at the mill will increase 3.4 per cent because the random-length lumber production involves less waste than stud production.

Clan Lake gold to be developed

EDMONTON (CP) — Precambrian Shield Resources Ltd. of Calgary and Numac Oil and Gas Ltd. of Edmonton will carry out a joint exploration and development program on gold properties at Clan Lake, 60 kilometres north of Yellowknife, Precambrian said in a prepared statement.

The joint venture last week completed staking of 11,000 acres adjacent to 40 claims known as the Nose Group.

Precambrian said previous work on the property included limited bulk sampling in 1967. Some 1,141 tons of ore recovered from this program was processed to produce 468 ounces of gold. The ore grade was 0.423 ounces per ton and recovery rate was 97 per cent.

"Previous diamond drilling has not been successful in confirming the grade realized in the bulk sampling," the Precambrian statement said, "but gold-bearing sections with average true widths in excess of nine metres were intersected and confirmed the strength and continuity of the vein zone."

Exploration is planned for other parts of the claims, it said.

A progress report to BCRIC shareholders

For British Columbia Resources Investment Corporation, 1979 has been an eventful year. Details are included in the Company's annual report, now being mailed to all registered shareholders. If your shares are not registered and you wish to receive a copy of the report, please write to us.

For the information of all shareholders, a summary of the highlights of the annual report is included below.

President.

1979 Highlights

- Consolidated net earnings of BCRIC were $40,757,000 on total revenues of $359,465,000 for 1979.
- Drilling on gas and oil lands resulted in the discovery of four natural gas wells and one oil well.
- Forest products performed reasonably well, and all three forestry companies have embarked on long-range strategic planning to improve their positions within the industry.
- BCRIC's short term investment portfolio, which consisted primarily of the $487.5 million raised during the public share offering, benefited from high interest rates. At year end, BCRIC's short term investments totalled $517,505,000.
- The company plans to participate actively in energy exploration and expects to commit $170 million to this sector over the next five years.
- Additional investments will be made in the natural resource industries of western Canada, including the forest products sector.

Curtis talks to New York lenders

NEW YORK (CP) — Finance Minister Hugh Curtis started a three-day "show-the-flag" visit to the New York financial community Monday, hoping to lay the groundwork for eventual provincial borrowing.

Curtis, who took over the finance portfolio last November, is holding a series of meetings with Wall Street investment houses and financial experts in what he described as a familiarization visit.

The minister painted a rosy picture of B.C.'s prospects for the next decade.

"I think we have an exciting story to tell with respect to B.C.," he said in an interview. "The reaction has been very favorable."

"With the change in portfolio last November, it seemed appropriate," he said of his visit.

"Further, Larry Bell has just assumed the position of deputy minister, so therefore we are a new team. I felt I wanted to get here to establish contact."

Curtis also said he told American investment bankers and analysts he had talked to that B.C.'s economy is very healthy and that its future looks prosperous.

He told them the economy has made a strong recovery since the Social Credit party replaced the NDP in government in 1975 despite some tight budgets.

"Now we are in a position to use the natural wealth of the province to assist the private sector."

"I was asked what is the major problem facing B.C. in the 1980s," he said. "Probably it is coping with the growth, accommodating the growth which all indicators suggest is coming to B.C."

He cited as an example that the province wants to export its vast reserves of coal and plans major expansion of research and development in coal gasification.

"Thus far we've been very well received," he said. "We're not unknown to the New York financial community, but perhaps the extent of our growth and our prosperity is not fully understood. That's one of the underlying reasons for the visit."

While there are no immediate plans for the province to float a bond issue in New York, that prospect also played a role in his visit.

"At some point in the forseeable future, B.C. Hydro will undertake a bond issue," he said. "It is important, therefore, that the people with whom B.C. Hydro deal be fully briefed."

Curtis winds up his visit Wednesday.

Gov't switch traps Polish seaman?

VANCOUVER (UPC) — A Polish seaman may be deported this week because his appeal to stay in Canada has fallen into the gulf between the outgoing federal Conservative government and the incoming Liberal administration.

Lawyer Don Rosenbloom said Monday Tadeusz Jakubowski, who for two years has failed to win refugee status in Canada, has been given a final departure notice telling him he must leave the country by Thursday.

Rosenbloom said departing Immigration Minister Ron Atkey has not indicated if he would grant Jakubowski a special minister's permit. The Liberals will not take power until next week.

B.C. Liberal Senator Ray Perrault has publicly supported the seaman's case, but Rosenbloom said even if the new Liberal immigration minister proved to be sympathetic to Jakubowksi, it would be too late to prevent the deportation.

Rosenbloom said the government cannot tamper with an adjudication office decision last week that formally denied a requested extension of the deportation date.

Jakubowski, 40, has lost all appeals to remain in the country since he jumped a Polish ship two years ago.

An immigration department spokesman had earlier said the seaman did not qualify as a refugee because his case did not involve "extreme humanitarian reasons" or "persecution."

But because Jakubowski has no passport, he would be deported back to Poland where he says he would go to jail for five to seven years because of previous run-ins with Communist authorities.

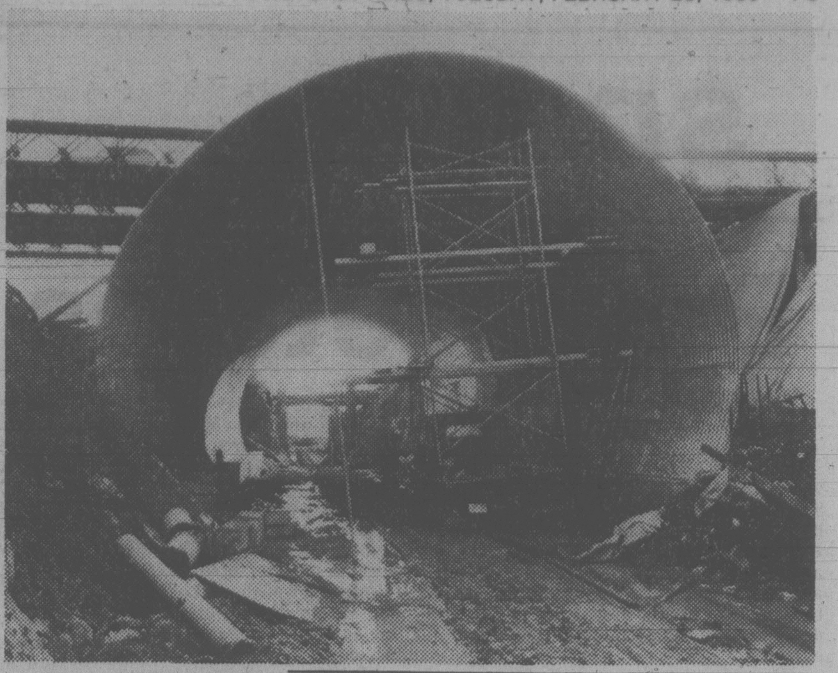
Premier likes majority

Premier Bill Bennett Monday danced around the question of whether he prefers a Liberal to a Conservative federal government and said only that he's pleased a majority government was elected last week.

The premier, just back from a Hawiian vacation, promised to press for recognition of B.C.'s claim to offshore resources.

The premier said that in the past, Liberal governments have been reluctant to give control of offshore resources to the provinces.

And he said he's not unduly concerned over talk of western separation from the rest of Canada, adding that he believes in a strong, united country.



PIPE TUNNEL below Seymour is part of the $800,000 bridge replacement project at Vernon which is rapidly nearing completion.

Stock Market Signals
Bullish Times ahead.

Biggest Bull Market in History Could Occur in Next Five Years.

That is the opinion of Don Cormie, President of the $250-million Edmonton-based Principal Group. He has 25 years of experience and research to back him up.

Cormie has observed that stock prices and economic trends occur in recurring cycles. "Compared to real estate prices, North American stocks have not been as cheap, since 1921," says Cormie. "The eight year period following 1921 was the beginning of the last great bull market. During that time the Dow Jones Average went from 64 to 385."

Cormie believes today's stock prices could offer the same buying opportunity as in 1921. At that time the majority of investors were frantically buying real estate and gold and ignoring the stock market — except the few astute investors who saw the bargain basement prices of the stock market.

"The key to successful investing is to buy the bargains. Today, as in 1921, the majority of investors are still ignoring bargain basement prices in the stock markets. In fact stocks are still valued at historically low prices."

This straight forward philosophy is not idle speculation on Cormie's part. Principal Group's Investment Department maintains charts, graphs and computerized records that date back to the 1700's. Based on this data, Principal Group has become one of the rising stars among economic research and investment firms in Canada.

Principal Venture Fund Ltd. has increased over 3½ times after all fees, or 28.8% per year since January 1975. One thousand dollars invested then would have been worth $3,546 as of December 31, 1979. This fund emphasizes agressive capital appreciation.

Principal Growth Fund has increased 168.4% after all fees in the last five years. One thousand dollars invested on December 31, 1974 would now be worth over $2684. with reinvestment of all distributions. This fund is eligible for RRSP investments.

Collective Mutual Fund Ltd., which stresses international blue chip companies, has increased 141.1% after all fees since January 1, 1975. That's a compound annual rate of return of 19.2%.

None of these returns are guaranteed, nor is there 100% certainty that the next bull cycle will be like the rest. But Principal has committed itself to a growth strategy that has been successful.

Why should you as an investor buy Principal's investment funds? When you do, you immediately share in the 25 years of research and investment expertise the company has developed. You buy the full-time, professional management of managers who know a bargain when they see one. You immediately buy the safety represented by the diversification of over 30 stocks each fund owns. You buy the accounting and tax reporting forms that the company provides. You make an investment with liquidity. And, your shares in the fund may be presented for redemption on any business day at their net asset value. Net asset value is reported daily in the major Canadian newspapers.

Can you afford to miss what could be the investment buying opportunity of this coming decade? For as little an investment of $600.00 or more you can buy and own the investment expertise of real professionals.

Whether you're a small or large investor phone us now for further information to get the whole story on why we think stocks are a bargain.

Pride returns to Lake Placid streets

Newsday

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. — For two weeks, Ted, the newsdealer on Main Steet, has worn a glum expression on his face. Each morning as he snipped the twine on bundles of newspapers and read the headlines blaring chaos and mismanagement in Lake Placid, the corners of his mouth turned down farther than Emmett Kelly's ever did.

His pride, like that of most of the 2,700 inhabitants of this mountain village, was stung.

"Hey," Ted called to an out-of-town customer Monday, "I'll bet you didn't think this little back-water town could do it, did ya?" It was the first time he had been seen with a grin.

The day after the 13th Winter Olympics ended, the day cars once again drove up and down Main Street and tourists were scarce, the residents were proud. But the Winter Games are not over here. They will be played for years to come.

Breaking Even — "The break-even point is obtainable," said Peter Spurney, the outsider brought in as general manager of the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee 16 months ago when the committee could no longer manage. "The assets of the LPOOC exceed its liabilities. We're going to go through some periods of slow payments to our creditors but we're not going to go into bankruptcy, we're not going to miss any of our payrolls.

"We had a cash flow problem because of the International Olympic Committee. The Irving Trust Co. had agreed to give us a $2 million line of credit to carry us through into March, when we are to get final payments of $4 million from sponsors. But in the middle of the games the IOC refused to give up rights to first payment a $1 million loan it made to the LPOOC in 1976. Because of that we lost the line of credit.

"The IOC could have bankrupted the Games before they were half over. We got pre-payments from some sponsors and that has carried us through. To me the low point of the Olympics was not the buses, not the negative response of the press, but the relationship of the IOC to Lake Placid."

Taking the Blame — "I'm the one who's responsible for the transportation plan, I take full responsibility for everything that went wrong," Spurney said. "We knew from the beginning, because of the constraints on lodging and transportation in the Olympic region, that we were going to be severely criticized. We knew that we had logistical problems with the buses and we knew that the system was fragile, that we were flying alone.

"The transportation breakdown was most unfortunate but the press amplified it. No one knew, or cared to know, that we had already paid $400,000 up-front to the bus company. We couldn't throw that money away. We had to go with the bus company and had to try to make the system work. I would never undertake a project like this again without more guarantees of support from the state and federal governments to help manage crises. I never had those cards in my hand when I needed to play them. But in balance I'm proud of Lake Placid. The goals we set, we achieved. This was the 'Olympics in perspective' we promised, with the focus on the athletes and the events."

Cashing In — "It was the most outstanding February Lake Placid has ever had," said the president of the Lake Placid Chamber of Commerce, Ed Wibrecht. "The bar business set international records, the fast-food places did very well, but the top-end restaurants didn't do as well as they had anticipated. It wasn't 'Wow!' but it was a good winter all the way through. With all the good publicity we've received, it's going to be very exciting for people who visit here in the future. Lake Placid will stack up against any other winter resort in the world."

What Next? — What do you do with 70- and 90-meter ski jumps, the only luge and bobsled runs in the Western Hemisphere, a speedskating oval and an Olympic fieldhouse than can seat every man, woman and child in this village three times over?

The future use of the close to $50 million in athletic facilities built for the Olympics — not including the $11 million spent at Whiteface Mountain, the state-run ski area where the Alpine events were held — is uncertain. The U.S. Olympic Committee is considering designating Lake Placid as a permanent winter sports training center for American ahletes, but there is no formal plan for coordinated operation of all the facilities nor any firm commitment from the state and federal governments to subsidize the operating costs. Those are the Winter Games yet to be played.

Heiden, hockey gold were Olympic peaks

The weekend in review and so ended the Winter Olympics. And if the U.S. didn't win the total medal or point count, who cares? They did everything else that counted most and probably will be remembered the longest.

Eric Heiden's five gold medals in five events in speed skating is a feat that perhaps never will be accomplished again while the United States victory in the hockey arena must rank as one of the most remarkable sports upsets in history.

There should be no doubt, even now, that the Russians had by far the best hockey team at the Games. But don't tell that to your American friends. That would be a sure way of losing your "thanks Canada" badge. But in a tournament they really had no business winning, the Americans just went out there and did their thing the best way they knew how and it proved to be enough against monstrous odds.

They not only beat the Russians in what had to be a fine display of disciplined hockey, but they also beat the Czechs, perhaps the second best in the amateur world, and then, on the final day, Sunday, continued their amazingly strong third-period heroics by coming from behind to beat the Finns and get the gold medal. The players reached an emotional high that seeped into more than a few living rooms during the telecasts while the pro-American crowds naturally had much to do with keeping the drama as it unfolded at a fever pitch as the impossible dream was being realized.

That was the peak, along with Heiden, in this view, and now I wonder if the U.S. will be invited to the Canada Cup.

Otherwise, IOC chief Lord Killanin took advantage of the situation, as a true leader of the Games should, when he said: "These Games proved that we can do something to contribute to good in the world whatever our differences may be. If we can all come together, it will be for a better world and perhaps we can avoid the holocaust which may well be upon us."

Amen.

Otherwise, an old sport in knowing hands went on view at Centennial Stadium with the Victoria Seasprays inaugurating the Pacific Northwest Field Lacrosse League by scoring a pair of convincing wins over Burnaby and Vancouver.

And while field lacrosse is quite different from the "box" variety, don't ever think just because the field is wider and longer that the game is less rough. Far from it as it is permissible under the rules to check a player if he is within five feet of a loose ball. And the sticks are longer too, especially those of the defenders, the better to snag high passes with or upend an unsuspecting opponent. The penalty rule is different, penalties being assessed on a time basis — 30 seconds to three minutes — as determined by the referee.

Higher scores will probably be the rule at first because the players do have more freedom to roam while the goals are bigger than those in box lacrosse. And once the box lacrosse players — who by the very nature of that sport already have fine stick-handling skills — become more adroit in their new duties, the pace could quicken and some interesting exhibitions result.

Certainly, the Seasprays showed more cohesion and a better attack than the visitors. Jim Lynch had a fine day Saturday and the game seems made to order for his booming shot. Kevin Alexander turned in his usual sound performance, particularly as a playmaker, while the unheralded Mike Thomas and goalkeeper Mike Simmons, an intermediate box lacrosse player from Courtenay, also showed to advantage.

The weather at Centennial was, as usual, cold, which may have held the crowds down. But that's the norm and the game should catch on with better weather. Certainly, box lacrosse fans should have a look, and maybe the younger players too. It has to be an excellent conditioner and after all is not a totally unknown sport.

The Victoria Foundations won the national championship and Mann Cup in 1919 and, going back a little farther, lacrosse had its beginning with the eastern Algonquin tribes. The Algonquins carried it down to the Hurons, Iroquois and Cherokee and later it was taken west by various tribes. It got its name from the French during the 14th century. The christening occurred a century before a Frenchman saw a North American Indian. The French word "la crosse" referred to any game involving a curved stick and the name stuck as the lacrosse stick resembled a bishop's crosier which was used for more saintly purposes.

In the old days, of course, there were hordes of players and an almost unlimited field of play. The game was very rough and casualties heavy. Later teams were reduced to 60 men with the goals 30 feet wide and about 500 feet apart. By 1797, the Indians were using a form of a face-off and also team substitutions. By 1825, the teams were down to seven men with the goals 40 to 50 yards apart, much as now.

And also, in deference to the Olympic theme, Canada has won two Olympic gold medals in lacrosse, in 1904 at St. Louis and in 1908 at London. And just last year in Britain, an Eastern-oriented Canadian all-star team, captured the World championship from a favored U.S. team. It is no longer an Olympic sport. Pity.

Feted athletes oppose Carter call

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Carter gave a hero's welcome to the U.S. Winter Olympic team Monday but was confronted with widespread opposition among the athletes to his call for a boycott of the Summer Games in Moscow.

Carter conducted a colorful, emotion-filled pageant of praise at the White House for the athletes who competed in Lake Placid.

But after a luncheon given by the President and his wife, speedskater Eric Heiden said that almost all the members of the team had signed a petition opposing Carter's demand for a boycott of the Moscow Olympics.

Heiden, who won five gold medals in speed skating and was personally hailed by the President moments earlier, said the athletes brought the petition with them. But he was unsure whether it was delivered to Carter.

"I don't think a boycott is the right thing," Heiden said. "I don't like politics in sport. It's hard on the people who have been training all their lives."

Carter called for the Moscow Games boycott as a protest against Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

In Monday's ceremony, the President repeated his pledge and said he would seek to provide alternative competition for the athletes.

"The Soviet invasion of Afghanistan has violated world peace and the principles of the Olympics," he said from the balcony of the south portico of the White House, looking down at the athletes.

He said he would soon meet some of the athletes due to compete in the Summer Games to discuss organizing "an alternate world-class competition that will not harm Olympic principles or future Olympic games."

"We are often told there are no more heroes," Carter told a cheering crowd of government workers waving American flags. "But our Olympic athletes are heroes."

The ceremony began with the Marine Band playing the Olympic theme as the athletes marched up the stairs to be greeted by a beaming Preident.

Carter told the athletes: "You've thrilled the entire nation and we are all grateful."

The President embraced Heiden and warmly greeted the American hockey team which upset the Soviet squad and went on to capture the gold medal.

"Eric Heiden's performance will be remembered for years to come," hetold the crowd. He called the hockey victory perhaps the greatest upset in the history of sport.

A bill to award Congressional medals to Heiden and the hockey team was introduced in the House of Representatives by Republican Frank Annunzio.

Hockey players are congratulated by President and Mrs. Carter on balcony of White House.

Nova Scotia rolls along in top spot

EDMONTON (CP) — Underdogs had their day and favorites faltered but Nova Scotia just kept steaming along Monday in the Canadian women's curling championship.

Colleen Jones' Halifax rink picked up its fourth and fifth straight victories in the 11-round event, downing Regina's Marj Mitchell 8-7 in the afternoon and edging Cathy Shaw of Yellowknife, N.W.T., 6-5 in the evening.

Shaw, a 1978 Lassie-winning skip who was unbeaten going into the fourth round, also dropped a 10-6 upset to Elayne Thomson of Crapaud, P.E.I.

Meanwhile, Joan Dexter of New Westminster picked up two straight wins after three consecutive losses by clubing veteran Sue Anne Bartlett of Labrador City, Nfld., 8-3, then upending Mitchell 10-6. Mitchell had been considered a strong playoff contender.

Alberta's Barb Davis of Lethbridge swept the two rounds with a last-end 6-5 victory over Christine Bodogh of St. Catharines, Ont., and a 7-3 win over Bartlett. Bodogh came back to hand Winnipeg's Donna Brownridge a 6-5 defeat in the fifth round after Brownridge scored her first win of the event by beating Lavigne 7-6. The Moncton rink lost 9-7 to Dorothy Crowe of St. Bruno, Que.

Jones pays little attention to being undefeated since the important thing is to make the four-team playoff round Saturday.

"It depends on how we react to everything," she said after her fourth-round win. "If we let this go to our heads and think, 'gee, four and oh,' because four and oh is nothing. We still have a long way to go."

Alberta is second in the standings with a 4-1 mark, Quebec third at 3-1 and Ontario fourth at 3-2. New Brunswick, B.C. and the Territories each have two wins and Saskatchewan, P.E.I., Manitoba and Newfoundland one each.

Sports tonight

Sports fans in the Greater Victoria area face a choice of either live hockey or televised basketball tonight.

Victoria Cougars are gunning for a 13th straight win over New Westminster Bruins in a Western Hockey League game starting at 8 in Memorial Arena. Victory would move runner-up Victoria to within one point of Portland Winter Hawks.

At Pearkes Arena, Saanich Braves and Oak Bay Trios tangle in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game beginning at 7:30.

Television viewers can take in a National Basketball Association tussle between Seattle SuperSonics and Los Angeles Lakers at 8 on Channel 7.

Lessons for Canada in U.S. hockey win

By ERNIE FEDORUK

One of the happiest figures pulling out of Victoria on Sunday was John Mariucci.

Now assistant general manager of Minnesota North Stars and the first American-born player to make it big in the National Hockey League (as a defenceman), Mariucci viewed Victoria Cougars' 3-1 Western Hockey League victory over the Regina Pats at Memorial Arena on Saturday night in a scouting capacity.

As was the case with more than a dozen other scouts, he didn't head for his next assignment until he had watched the United States clinch a gold medal in the Olympic Games' hockey competition with its 4-2 victory Sunday over Finland.

Needless to say, Mariucci, who coached the U.S. team in the 1950s, was ecstatic.

While his scarred countenance mirrored great delight, the scout with some poignant thoughts about the stirring American triumph was Ron Caron of the Montreal Canadiens.

It matters not that defenceman Bill Baker, one of America's new heroes, is Montreal's property and is ticketed to join Nova Scotia Voyageurs of the American League next season.

"It has to be a great thing for hockey, not only in the U.S., but in Canada," said Caron. "But it will be good for Canada only if we learn."

And what can Canada, the cradle of hockey, learn from a country that, supposedly, is not generally known for its production of players?

Many things, said Caron, but for starters he ticked off "the academic parallel, de-emphasizing the win-at-all-costs attitude in minor ranks, and drastic reduction of schedules that now border the ridiculous."

"It's time to recognize the parallel between sports and schooling. It used to be that teachers taught all subjects. Then they brought in specialized teachers and tutors. Hockey should move that way . . . bring in dual coaching or more assistants. Teams are heading in that direction, but not fast enough.

"More important, we have to get away from 70-game schedules that stretch into 100 with playoffs and exhibitions. The kids who won the gold medal, most of them out of college, play about 36 games. It didn't hurt them.

"It didn't hurt because U.S. players, generally, are far better at accepting discipline — on or off the ice — than Canadians. The American hockey player is not as spoiled as our kids because he doesn't expect as much as the Canadian.

"I find, too, that the U.S. college and high school player, who can't start his sport until the football season is over, plays fewer games but sticks to hockey for 12 months of the year. In the summer, he's the one buying power-skating lessons.

"U.S. players are acquiring greater grounding in fundamentals such as skating and shooting simply because of their short schedules, and the fact they have more time to work on fundamentals. That is why I disagree with the geniuses in Canada who say we have to have 70-plus games in order to produce players.

"The situation is worse in minor hockey because the emphasis on winning. The good kids get 30-40 minutes of ice time but others, who might be just as good if they had the chance, get five or 10 minutes. By the time our kids are 15, they've had their trip to Europe but even many of the good ones are fed up with hockey because it isn't fun any more.

"Put the fun and fundamentals back into hockey.

"And if you can't skate, forget it. When (U.S. coach Herb) Brooks was assembling his team, the country was divided into four sections. They brought the best to Denver, but if a guy didn't have the wheels (skating), Brooks wasn't interested.

"You can't become a good skater with only five minutes of ice time in a game."

It's Sutter's way to spell 'relief'

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

To Chicago Cubs, relief is spelled S-u-t-t-e-r. To Bruce Sutter, relief is spelled $-7-0-0,-0-0-0.

But even though Sutter won the highest salary arbitration award Monday since baseball instituted the system six years ago, he had mixed feelings.

"I'm very happy about the award," said the pitcher who won the National League's Cy Young Award last season after leading the majors with 37 saves and turned down the Cubs' offer of $350,000 for 1980, choosing to put this year's salary in the hands of an arbitrator.

"But it still isn't what I want. What I want is a long-term contract that will give me long-term security. I'll admit $700,000 is an awful lot of money, but if I go out there and get hurt, my family and I can't live the rest of our lives on it."

The 1980 arbitration cases came to an end Monday with Steve Kemp of Detroit Tigers and Ray Knight and Dave Collins of Cincinnati Reds all winning demands.

That brought the total number of arbitration winners to 15 while 11 players lost out.

Sutter is seeking $400,000 a year for the next five years but wants much of the money in deferred payments as a tax shelter.

Islanders hot choice for high school title

By MAX LOW

Defending champions are not always the hot favorites going into a tournament, as Parkland Panthers know only too well right now.

Exceeding all expectations, the Panthers upset highly-rated Nanaimo Islanders to win the Vancouver Island High School Boys' "AA" Basketball championship at Nanaimo last year. They aren't given much chance of repeating that feat, however, when the 30th annual Island tourney gets under way Thursday at the University of Victoria's McKinnon Gym.

Main reason is the fact the Islanders are third-ranked in the province right now — behind top-ranked Richmond Colts and Duchess Park Condors of Prince George — and qualified for the tournament as the No.1 entry out of four Up-Island schools while the Panthers struggled into the third of four Lower Island berths.

Coached by Joe Milligan, the Panthers were beaten by Vic High Totems in the South Island playoffs at the Old UVic Gym last weekend but then got past Mt. Doug to take third place.

Belmont Braves, coached by Muzz Bryant, had already captured the South Island league title and took the No.1 berth without competing in the playoffs and Vic High, coached by Ash Valdal, also beat Oak Bay Bays to grab second spot.

The Bays, coached by Dave Morgan, eliminated Mt. Doug to sneak into the fourth Lower Island berth.

North Island playoffs left Nanaimo ranked first and they'll carry that ranking with them into the Island tourney. Courtenay Towhees are the second-seeded North Island entry while Cowichan Thunderbirds are third and Port Alberni Chieftains are fourth.

First game in the double knockout tournament is between Cowichan and Vic High at 3:45 p.m. Thursday. Courtenay plays Parkland at 5:30, Belmont meets Port Alberni at 7:15 and Nanaimo takes on Oak Bay at 9 p.m.

Friday's second-round play will begin earlier — at 1:45 p.m. — because the first game of UVic Vikettes' best-of-three Canada West playoff series with Calgary Dinnies has to be fitted in during the evening.

The Island tourney winds up Saturday and the top three teams go on to the B.C. High School Boys' "AA" Basketball championships in Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum the following weekend.

NHL Old Stars play here

ANDY BATHGATE
. . . Hart Trophy winner

Victoria Kinks, formerly called the Racquet Club Kings, will likely have their hands full in an exhibition old-timers' hockey game March 14 in Victoria.

National Hockey League Old Stars will form the opposition for the 8 p.m. game in Memorial Arena.

An advance party of the Old Stars, including former Toronto Maple Leaf greats Bob Nevin and Eddie Shack, was in Victoria on Monday and general-manager Ross Brewitt noted there were at least 16 former NHL players in the lineup.

Other former Toronto players on the roster are Frank Mahovlich, Mike Pelyk, Norm Ullman, Andy Bathgate, Jim Pappin and goaltender Marv Edwards.

Hall of Famer Harry Howell (New York Rangers, Los Angeles Kings), Pierre Pilote (Chicago Black Hawks), Larry Carriere (Buffalo Sabres, Vancouver Canucks), Dennis Hull (Black Hawks, Detroit Red Wings), Dean Prentice (Rangers, Minnesota North Stars, Bruins, Red Wings, Pittsburgh Penguins), George Morrison (St. Louis Blues), Bob Wall (Red Wings, Kings, Blues) and Keith McCreery (Penguins, Montreal Canadiens) are also in the lineup.

Kinks won the "C" division title at the international oldtimers championships in Tokyo last year and finished third in the "D" event of the recent Pacific Cup tourney in Victoria.

The 19-member Victoria squad hopes to compete at the international tournament in Edinburgh, Scotland, this year and net proceeds of the exhibition contest will be divided equally between the team and the Canadian Oldtimers Hockey Association.

"We get an honorarium of about $100 a game," said Nevin. "We're putting on a show, entertaining hockey without slapshots and bodychecks, and we've been well received so far."

CAROL TURNEY LOOS
. . . unanimous pick

Loos, Hebb all-stars

CALGARY (CP) — Carol Turney-Loos of Victoria, the scoring champion, Trix Kannekens of Alberta and Janis Paskevich of Calgary are the unanimous choices to women's all-star basketball teams as announced by the Canada West University Athletic Association.

Also named to the first all-star team were Dori McPhail of Calgary and Luanne Hebb of Victoria.

The second team consists of (in order of votes received) Agnes Baker, British Columbia; Sheila Brennan, Saskatchewan; Lori Chizik, Calgary; Lana Simpson, Lethbridge; and Shelley Ready, Saskatchewan.

It was the second straight year that Kannekens and Hebb made the first all-star team. Paskevich was on the second team last year, while Brennan remains on the second team.

Simmer is the difference

MONTREAL (CP) — What a difference Charlie Simmer makes — to Marcel Dionne and Los Angeles Kings.

Before left winger Simmer missed 16 games through injury, centre Dionne had averaged 2.08 points per game in the first half of the National Hockey League season. In Simmer's absence, Dionne dropped to 1.31 points per game — still more than respectable.

Statistics released Monday show that in six games since Simmer returned, Dionne has an average of 1.83 points and the Kings, who were 3-12-1 in the games Simmer missed, have three victories and three losses.

Simmer has six goals and three assists in his last six games, giving him season totals of 42 goals, 36 assists and 78 points, good for sixth place in the scoring race.

Dionne leads the scoring parade with 115 points from 44 goals and 71 assists. Second-place right winger Guy Lafleur of Montreal Canadiens has missed two games with a knee injury, may miss several more and has slipped nine points behind Dionne at 106 points, including 44 goals.

Centre Wayne Gretzky of Edmonton Oilers is third with 35 goals and 65 assists for 100 points. Gretzky, who was 19 last month, is the youngest player ever to earn 100 points in a season, surpassing the achievement of centre Pierre Larouche, then with Pittsburgh Penguins, in 1975-76.

Centre Bryan Trottier of New York Islanders, the defending scoring champion, is fourth with 32 goals and 50 assists for 82 points, and right winger Dave Taylor, linemate of Dionne and Simmer, is fifth with 33 goals and 48 assists for 81 points.

Dionne has 15 power-play goals to lead that category, and four players — right winger Mike Murphy of Los Angeles, right winger Reggie Leach and centre Rick MacLeish of Philadelphia Flyers and centre Larry Patey of St. Louis Blues — are tied for the lead in short-handed goals with three each.

Dionne and right winger Blair MacDonald of Edmonton have four three-goal games each.

Among goaltenders, Chicago's Tony Esposito leads with six shutouts and 26 victories.

The best personal goals-against average belongs to Doug Keans of Los Angeles at 1.73, while Bob Sauve and Don Edwards have combined to give Buffalo a league-leading team average of 2.60.

Hendersons cinch title

Henderson Realty, sparked by guards Chris Trumpy and Quinn Groenhyde, tripped Trilec Seniors 125-104 Monday at Central Junior High School to clinch first place in the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League.

Trumpy fired 36 points, including 22 in the first half, and Groenhyde contributed 35, including 27 before the break.

Robbie Parris added 18 points and Ken Shields chipped in 15 for Realtors, who were ahead 74-52 at half time.

Bruce English (27 points), Harbinder Sangarah (24) and Daryl Johnson (20) led Trilec.

Junior hockey trial squad

Officials of the Vancouver Island Women's Field Hockey Association have named a 28-player squad from which two teams will be chosen to represent the Island in the B.C. Junior Girls' Field Hockey championships April 19 and 20 in Duncan.

Braves survive a rough test

Saanich Braves defeated Juan de Fuca Gulls 5-2 in a penalty-filled South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game Monday at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Tracy Patterson led Braves with two goals and singles came from Marty Irvine, Ron Brooks and Jamie Bowes. Ian Fraser and Terry Coghlin replied for Gulls.

Mike Spiteri came up with a good goaltending job to keep Gulls in range as Braves held a 52-30 advantage in shots. Marty Wakelyn was in goal for Saanich, which held a 3-0 lead after the second period after the squads had battled to a scoreless deadlock in the first 20 minutes.

A total of six fighting majors and 180 minutes in penalties were handed out in the contest.

Schmautz to play for Cherry again

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Oilers and Colorado Rockies of the National Hockey League have made a one-for-one trade that will see Bobby Schmautz again playing for coach Don Cherry.

A spokesman for the Oilers said Monday they have sent Schmautz, 34, to Colorado for 24-year-old centre and left-winger Don Ashby, a former first-round draft pick of Toronto Maple Leafs.

Schmautz, a right-winger, played for Boston Bruins under Cherry before Cherry left to coach Colorado at the start of this season. Schmautz was traded to Edmonton from Boston earlier this season.

Is Stenmark streak over?

WATERVILLE VALLEY, N.H. (AP) — Hans Enn of Austria took the lead after the first run of the men's World Cup giant slalom ski race Tuesday in a race that looked as though it would end the amazing string of Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden.

Enn had a time of one minute 26.34 seconds over the 1,282-metre course, which wound through 56 gates. Phil Mahre of the United States was second in 1:26.57. The second run was to be held later in the day.

Stenmark, who has won 14 consecutive World Cup giant slaloms, fell at the top of the course and could manage no faster than 1:29.41, more than three seconds off the lead and 28th after the first run. It appeared that even Stenmark would be unable to make up that huge difference.

Boris Strel of Yugoslavia was third in 1:26.59, followed by Peter Luescher of Switzerland in 1:26.81, Jarle Halsnes of Norway in 1:26.88, Bruno Nockler of Italy in 1:26.93, Odd Sorli of Norway in 1:27.02, Jacques Luethy of Switzerland in 1:27.08, Gerhard Jager of Austria in 1:27.28 and Andreas of Wenzel of Liechtenstein in 1:27.33.

The last time Stenmark was beaten in a World Cup giant slalom was March 6, 1978, on this same mountain.

Caps sign SFU grad to contract

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Whitecaps increased their Canadian content by one for the upcoming North American Soccer League season by signing former Simon Fraser University player Neil McEachern to an amateur contract Monday.

The 21-year-old fullback from New Westminster, B.C. was a third-round draft pick of the Whitecaps after four years at SFU.

He also was a member of the Canadian national youth team in 1976 and the Canadian Olympic team in 1979.

Rangers for sale

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Brad Corbett, Texas Rangers chairman of the board, said Monday he was going to sell the team as "quickly as possible."

Corbett, said the same thing July 4th, 1977, calling his players "dogs on the field and dogs off the field."

Corbett later recanted and again became involved in a series of trades and adventures into the free agent market which failed to produce his long sought American League championship.

A likely candidate to do business with the wheeling-dealing Corbett is Eddie Chiles, chief executive officer of The Western Co.., an oilfield equipment firm. Chiles, 70, invested $900,000 in the Rangers last year.

Bombers confirm Ruoff resignation

WINNIPEG (CP) — The resignation of place-kicker Bernie Ruoff of the Canadian Football League Winnipeg Blue Bombers, has been confirmed.

Ruoff, 1979 scoring leader in the CFL, has been on the trading block ever since he pleaded guilty to a charge of marijuana possession of marijuana.

Prat collects three titles

Roddy Prat of Victoria swept all three under-16 titles when the British Columbia junior badminton championships ended Sunday in Vancouver.

Prat of the Racquet Club of Victoria defeated Jeff Bray of Vancouver 15-8, 15-9 in the boys' singles final and then combined with clubmate Rajbir Sidhu to win the doubles title with an 18-13, 15-9 victory over Brent Dunlop of Powell River and Aniel Kaul of Cassiar.

He rounded off a perfect performance by teaming up with Vancouver's Janice Kusmack for a 15-4, 8-15, 15-9 win over Bray and Jillian Calder in the mixed doubles final.

The feat won Prat a berth on the provincial team that will compete in the Canadian junior badminton championships at Toronto, Mar.19 to 23.

Janice Kusmack picked up a second title when she beat Jacqueline Johnston of Vancouver 11-8, 11-6 in the girls' singles final but just missed out on a sweep of all three crowns when she and Teresa Harwood of Victoria were nipped 15-11, 9-15, 15-9 by Johnston and Calder in the girls' doubles final.

Two skaters earn pair of victories

Noreen Sullivan of Sooke and Lisa Patterson of the Racquet Club of Victoria each chalked up two wins during the Vancouver Island regional figure skating competition for non-qualifying events in Juan de Fuca Arena at the weekend.

Sullivan won the women's bronze mixed figures and the bronze freeskate and partnered Terri Musfelt to a second-place finish in the bronze women's pairs competition behind Joana Baird and Deborah Marling of Mt. Arrowsmith.

Patterson captured the women's gold mixed figures and the silver freeskate.

Wille leads trial

Peter Wille, riding a 349 Montessa, topped the expert class in the Victoria Motorcycle Club's annual Major observed trial Sunday on the club property off Happy Valley Road.

Wille accumulated only 10 points under the reverse-scoring system to claim the victory.

A total of 48 riders took part in the event, which covered a seven-mile loop course broken down into 30 sections.

Results:

EXPERTS: 1. Peter Wille, 349 Montessa, Victoria, 10; 2. Ron Wilson, 325 Bultaco, Victoria, 13; 3. Martin Spriggs, 250 Yamaha, Victoria, 15.

SENIORS: 1. Ray Little, 348 Montessa, Victoria, 19 and 25 "cleans"; 2. Terry Anderson, 324 Bultaco, Victoria, 19 and 21 "cleans"; 3. Jim Raper, 348 Montessa, Victoria, 21.

NOVICES: 1. Robert Beecroft, 175 Yamaha, Victoria, 6; 2. Bill Nesbitt, 250 Yamaha, Victoria, 8; 3. Jim Hong, 175 Yamaha, Vancouver, 14.

Work on schedule for downhill event

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Organizers of the World Cup men's downhill ski race are on schedule in preparing for the March 4 event, which was moved to Lake Louise because of lack of snow at Chamonix, France. Lake Louise is about 50 kilometres northwest of Banff.

If you're in Parker races be prepared for the mud

They will be "off and running again" or perhaps floundering in the mud when the 13th annual Basil Parker cross country races are held in Central Saanich at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Don't let anybody fool you. If you're considering a run, be prepared. All courses will be "rather muddy" says meet director Malcolm McAvity in a mild warning. That's probably an understatement! In fact, mud is the main ingredient each year as runners wallow through trails, more suitable to hippos and winding through fields and bush and across streams.

But despite the mud, or perhaps because of it, the Basil Parker cross country event continues to be among Island's most popular races and this year's event run on the Cumberland Farm at 1528 Stellys Cross Road should be no exception.

Runners in the open men's, masters (over 40), junior men's (18, 19 and 20-year olds) and juvenile men's (16 and 17-year-olds) races will try to complete the sloppy 10,000-metre course while those in the open, junior and juvenile women's and the midget (14 and 15-year-old boys) events will cover a 5,000-metre course.

And for those competing in the midget girls' (14 and 15-year-olds), the bantam boys' and girls' (12 and 13), the pee wee boys' and girls' (10 and 11) and the joggers' and family (at least one parent and one child) races there is a 2,500-metre course.

There will be team awards (six runners to a team with the best four times counting) to third place and individual prizes to sixth place in each category except joggers and family. Masters ribbons will be awarded to each man 40 or over who competes the 10,000-metre course.

Winner of the open men's race takes home the Basil Parker Memorial Trophy while the open women's winner collects the Jean Butler Trophy.

Again, be ready for that mud!

"The course is an extremely wet and heavy one," the meet director admits. "We recommend that all competitors secure their running shoes very tightly and that they do not run in track suit pants which soon become waterlogged."

So all you prospective runners better do as the man says or you could end up losing not only your shoes but your pants as well.

Jockey Bill Skuse killed

LANGLEY (CP) — Bill Skuse, once one of British Columbia's top jockeys, was killed Saturday in a single-vehicle accident in this municipality just east of Vancouver.

RCMP said Skuse, 40, was a passenger in a car driven by apprentice jockey Ronald Bilodeau, 22. Police said the car left the road and plunged 10 metres down an embankment, landing upside down in a creek.

Bilodeau, who has spent the last two years riding at Exhibition Park and on the Interior circuit, escaped with minor cuts and bruises.

Skuse rode his first winner at Lansdowne in Richmond, B.C., in 1956. He also had mounts in California, New England and Louisiana.

His best year was 1960 when he rode 231 winners, fifth best in North America. Only Bill Hartack, Willie Shoemaker, Avelino Gomez and Johnny Sellers were more successful that year.

Skuse was given a life suspension in 1968 following an investigation into race-fixing at Exhibition Park. He was later give partial re-instatement.

Soccer rowdy jailed

BRISTOL, England (AP) — A soccer hooligan was jailed for four months and 26 others given heavy fines after scenes of violence at Saturday's English League match between Bristol Rovers and Chelsea.

Chelsea fan Derek Hitchman, 22, was jailed for four months after admitting a charge of threatening behavior. He had four previous convictions.

Mounted police were called in to deal with the Chelsea supporters, who were fighting before the match started.

There was more trouble during the match, which Bristol Rovers won 3-0.

When Rose Marie Beretta bought her London Life policy, we thought her dividend this year would be $162.

We were wrong.

THE FACT IS ROSE MARIE BERETTA'S DIVIDEND IS $314, ALMOST DOUBLE THE FIGURE WE ILLUSTRATED BACK IN 1958.

That's because our investment returns and claims experience have improved strongly over the years.

So we can return more to our participating policyowners – more in dividends to Canadians than any other insurance company.

In fact, we'll pay about $85 million in dividends this year, the highest amount we've ever paid in a single year.

And that's good news for our customers.

They can use their yearly dividends against policy loans. They can let them grow with us at compound interest. They can apply the dividends to increase their insurance and help offset the effects of inflation. They can put the dividends toward payment of premiums and reduce the out-of-pocket cost.

Of course, the effects of dividend changes are greater on some policies than on others, depending on the age of the customer and how long ago the policy was taken out.

Another thing: the amount of a dividend can't be exactly predicted far into the future and we wouldn't try. Too many variables are involved.

But ask Rose Marie Beretta.

Sometimes it's nice to be wrong.

Glenshiel to close in 2 years

The 75-year-old Glenshiel Hotel in downtown Victoria, home of 60 elderly, long-term residents, will be closed within two years, Housing Minister Jim Chabot announced Monday.

The provincial government will accept responsibility for rehousing the residents, he said. Officials of the B.C. Housing Management Commission will meet with the tenants to discuss their housing needs.

Chabot said the building is at the stage where it would require massive amounts of money to bring it up to standard for continued long-term use.

Instead, the government will spend between $150,000 and $180,000 on minor repairs to make the hotel comfortable while alternate accommodation is being found for the residents, a process which may take as long as two years.

When the last room is vacated, Chabot indicated the old building at 606 Douglas likely will be torn down.

There will be no special financial help for the tenants who are being forced to seek new homes at a time when Victoria is in the throes of a rental housing crisis.

"We're going to find them a space at the most attractive price possible," Chabot said.

However, he pointed out the government has a program to aid elderly renters who pay more than 25 per cent of their income for rent.

"So that will look after those in need of financial help."

The minister also said the government will not pay moving costs for the Glenshiel residents, except in hardship cases.

"I would think moving costs would be negligible," he said. "If there was any hardship we would take that into consideration."

The Glenshiel was purchased by the province seven years ago, when the NDP was in power, as part of a consolidation of properties in the legislative precinct.

Indians get cash study awards

A total of $1,400 has been awarded to native Indian students by the trustees of the Mungo Martin Memorial Awards Fund.

Awards of $200 went to Lucy Alphonse of the Cowichan band, a third year anthropology student at the University of Victoria, Maureen Baker of the Squamish Band, an art student at Capilano College in Vancouver, and Emily Willie of the Tsawataineuk Band, who is also studying art at Capilano College.

Awards worth $150 were given to Richard Rivet, of Victoria, in his final year of fine arts at UVic, Lydia and Annabel Hansen of the Kwakwala Band, who are studying native language and crafts at UVic and to Laura Wealick of the Tzeachton Band, who is taking an advanced art course from Tony Hunt.

Awards of $100 went to Shaunee Casavant, of the Sheshat Band, a nursing student at Camosun College, and Dorothy Sault of Vancouver, a nursing student at the Vancouver Vocational Institute.

Air Bridge eyes flights to Vancouver

A spokesman for a new company called Air Bridge is hoping to offer non-stop air service between Vancouver Island and Vancouver.

General manager Jim Wilson said an application was filed last month with the Canadian Transport Commission to operate flights between Vancouver and Victoria harbors and Vancouver and Nanaimo.

He said the company is waiting for licence approval before purchasing aircraft and facilities.

Hotel proposal doomed?

DUNCAN — A proposal to build a multi-million dollar hotel in Pioneer Park adjacant to the new Cowichan Community Centre appears doomed following a decision by Duncan council to cancel a meeting with developer Joe Silva, an area automobile dealer.

Council originally agreed to meet with Silva to discuss the plan which would have wiped out new baseball diamonds, a field hockey pitch and washrooms. Opposition from sports and political officials prompted a change of mind by council.

Ald. Alan Hussey, who missed the original meeting, moved council rescind its motion to meet Silva. Council agreed and recommended the developer meet instead with the technical planning committee.

Woodward's GREAT 4 DAY COINS and STAMP MARKET

Cash for these Items!

PLEASE NOTE: These are Buying prices. None of these items are for sale. Please, no telephone enquiries.

For 4 days only (Wednesday, February 27, to Saturday, March 1), Woodward's is running its popular coin and stamp market. Woodward's will purchase your coins, stamps, paper money, scrap gold, scrap silver, old pocket watches and any other jewellery items of value in the special Coin and Stamp section in the Mayfair Store. If you're interested in having your old gold or silver or your coin and/or stamp collections valued without obligation or bought for cash, come in and see one of our professionals during the next few days. For best service, come early.

Owing to the erratic market conditions of gold & silver, we reserve the right to adjust our prices depending on the daily market.

LOCATION: Woodward's Mayfair Shopping Centre, Special Coin, Stamp and Jewellery Section.

HOURS:

Wednesday, Feb. 27	9:30 a.m.-7:30 p.m.
Thursday, Feb. 28	9:30 a.m.-7:30 p.m.
Friday, Feb. 29	9:30 a.m.-7:30 p.m.
Saturday, March 1	9:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m.

GOLD AND SILVER*

GOLD SCRAP

We pay cash for any gold marked 9K, 10K, 14K, 18K, 22K. Unmarked will be tested for karat. We buy broken or out of style rings, bracelets, jewellery of all sorts, watches, bullion, nuggets. We pay $5.57 per gram and more (according to karat).

GOLD WAFERS

Recognized 1 oz. wafers up to $690.
Unrecognized 1 oz. wafers up to $650.
5 gram wafers up to $108.50
10 gram wafers up to $217.
100 gram wafers up to $2170.

(Prices may vary slightly with market at time of purchase.)

DENTAL GOLD

Old gold bridgework, plates, caps. We pay $8.35 per gram

ANTIQUE JEWELLERY

Special premiums paid for good antique jewellery. Lavaliers, bracelets, estate diamond pins, bracelets, important pieces are of special interest. Bring it in for our cash offer.

STERLING

We pay cash for all sterling silver or European continental silver, spoons, forks, knives, plates, trays, tea services, candlesticks, jewellery, etc. $20 per ounce and more. (Items weighted with plaster or other substances will be estimated.)

ANTIQUE SILVER

High prices paid for antique silver, Georgian, Victorian tea services, goblets, serving pieces, etc. (Condition must be good.)

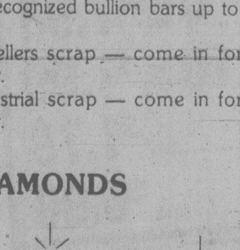
SILVER PLATE

We also buy items of silver plate (no cutlery) for recovery and refining of the silver. Tea services $15-$75. Large trays $5-$25, other small plated articles $1-$5 each.

SILVER BARS

Recognized trading bars up to $34 oz.
Unrecognized bullion bars up to $24. oz.
Jewellers scrap — come in for our offer.
Industrial scrap — come in for our offer.

DIAMONDS



There are over 100 grades of diamonds and each commands a different price. We have buyers qualified to measure and grade your diamond. Each is authorized to make you a cash offer! All diamonds valued for purchase only — without obligation.

LARGE DIAMONDS

2 karats and more $300 to $3,500 karat.
One karat $200 to $2,000 karat
½ karat $100 to $400 each.
Less than ½ karat $2 per point.

OLD MINE CUT DIAMONDS

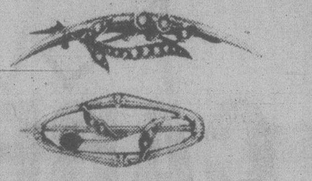
Many people have been led to believe that old style diamonds are not valuable. This is not true — they have less value than modern cuts, but you may still have a tidy sum of cash in that old cut diamond.

PLATINUM

We buy platinum jewellery and industrial scrap (crucibles, points, etc.) $18 per gram and more.

FRANKLIN MINT MEDALS AND ART BAR SETS

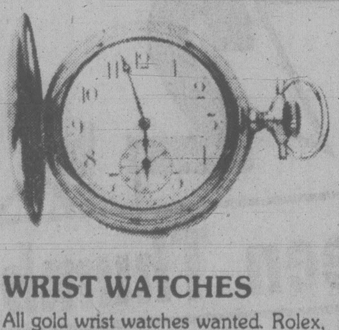
We buy all individual and complete sets of silver medals and art bars according to weight, and pay $23 per oz. and up — whether Franklin Mint or other private mints.



MILITARY MEDALS

We buy all Canadian, British, U.S. and Foreign military medals.

ANTIQUE WATCHES



WRIST WATCHES

All gold wrist watches wanted. Rolex, Omega, Patek Phillipe, Audemars Piquet, etc. We pay $20 to $5,000 each.

POCKET WATCHES

We buy any pocket watch — need not be working — need not be gold or silver — below are some sample prices we pay.

Prince Andrew has chosen to scrub, scrape and polish like any other midshipman during his 16 days of training on the carrier HMS Hermes. And like many other midshipmen, he chose to spend part of his time in port in a topless bar. Andrew was startled by a photographer as he slipped with some mates and his Scotland Yard bodyguards into Trader Jon's — a landmark Pensacola bar.

Sue Jacobs says she wasn't the ogler. She was the oglee and the boss shouldn't have fired her. The 21-year-old Traverse City, Mich., construction worker was sacked last summer by the D & L Contracting Co., because, says company vice president Bob Schmuckai, "She was distracting to the men ... they would stop working and go over and talk to her." The distraction — the bathing suit top she displayed when, like the men on the job, she shed her shirt in the summer heat. Says a furious Jacobs, "If the men weren't working because they were watching me, why didn't they fire the men?"

Prince Hiro, eldest grandson of Emperor Hirohito, accepted the crown of manhood in a colorful ceremony on his 20th birthday in Tokyo.

Israel's national airline, El Al, stirred a minor tempest when it decided to jettison its old turquoise-colored, first-class stewardess uniforms in favor of a new style. The women's division of the Histadrut National Labor Federation was first to register a protest. Apparently moved by rumors that the new outfits were to be slinky, tight-fitting dresses, Aliza Tamir, a Histadrut official, complained that the airline was turning its cabin attendants into sex symbols. El Al countered by publishing some of the designs — formal gowns, modestly cut, with yokes embellished by an embroidered geometric motif.

Steamtrain Maury Graham, king of the hobos, wears designer clothes. He shops at Salvation Army stores, checking labels, searching always for the hallmarks of quality: a moth hole perhaps, or a genteel fraying at the cuffs. "I have an image to maintain," said Graham. "Clothes make the hobo." Clothes could also be the start of a second career for the Toledo, Ohio, man who four times has been elected U.S. National Hobo King. Lately he has been featured on a local TV commercial for a men's fashion outlet and has appeared on television.

Dear Abby:

My friends and I had an argument the other day about the word "antidisestablishmentarianism."

We have looked in the dictionaries at school and we can't find it. We've also asked all our English teachers, and we still don't have the answer, so we're asking you.

Is a person who practices antidisestablishmentarianism an antidisestablishmentarian, or an antidisestablishmentarianist?

Also, is there any rule in the English language that says that if a word ends in "ism," the name for one who practices that belief must end in "ist?"

Cindy Perko

Dear Cindy:

Will you accept the word of Dr. Bill Rivers, professor of communications at Stanford?

He says you can't find "antidisestablishmentarianism" in the dictionary because it's not one word; it's a combination of words. However, you can find "disestablishment" in almost any dictionary.

Adding the prefix "anti" means that the person is against disestablishing the right to deprive the status of being, or becoming established. (The reason some people are so fascinated with the word is because it is so complex. The word establish is understood. Then disestablish is against establishing. Then adding anti will give you another word opposite disestablish. You see how it becomes complex?)

You may use either "antiestablishmentarian" or "antidisestablishmentarianist." They mean the same thing.

Dear Abby:

Greetings from another "I-never-thought-I'd-be-writing-to-you" Abby fan.

I am a 35-year-old professional woman, happily married with children, ages 14, 12 and a little one, 3 months old.

I am amazed at the number of people — some I hardly know — who ask me if my last baby was an "accident."

I have given answers that I thought were good-humored, but evasive.

How can I tell people that I consider such a question rude, improper, and insulting without being rude, improper, and insulting, too?

Burning

Dear Burning:

Respond with a question of your own: "Why do you want to know?" It stops 'em cold every time.

Dear Abby:

Stumped in Chicago just might get "Wendy" to see a psychiatrist by using the same strategy I used to get my husband to a marriage counsellor.

After one particularly violent quarrel, I simply said, "OK, our problems are all my fault. How about going with me to a marriage counsellor so that I can get some help?"

Uniform fits fine

By LON WOOD

A uniform may be sexy or dull, symbol of power or the epitome of pretension, but no matter how you look at it, it is being worn by more and more Victorians.

"You see this rise all the time — even small companies are going into uniformity of what their employees are wearing," says Jim Gibson, owner of Hall & Co. (1977) Big Horn Manufacturing Ltd. of Victoria. "But it doesn't necessarily mean this uniformity looks like they are wearing uniforms as such."

Gibson, whose firm primarily produces work clothing, said he feels the main reason for uniformity in business is to help the public identify the worker.

"You take the department stores. Very few of their employees are in uniform. They only have little badges with their names on them," he said. "But go into the food department, or any supermarket, and you can spot the smocks and tell who's who."

Olive Barnes, owner manager of Lady Mae Uniforms Ltd. in Victoria, told the Times some professions recognize that they require their own visible identity, while others have tried to downplay it.

"In a rest home or nursing home there is a certain mark of respect with a uniform," she said. " But because they want to establish a so-called 'home' atmosphere, some care facilities have dropped uniforms.

"This it is a disadvantage when you can't tell who is who. I think the owners are remiss if they don't let the staff wear uniforms."

Mrs. Barnes said it isn't true that the public doesn't like uniforms.

"They are quite assured to see someone turned out crisp and well-tailored — especially a nurse in her white pantsuit and cap," she said. "And it's cheaper in the long run. How else can you outfit yourself for $35?"

The latest move to uniformity is evident in Victoria area banks.

Recently, Sainthill Levine Ltd., the Toronto company that produces uniforms for Canadian Forces and Canada Customs personnel, closed a deal with the Bank of British Columbia to outfit its 800 women employees in Mediterranean blue jackets, jumpers and skirts at a cost of about $150 for a three-or-four-piece outfit.

"These bank people look very fashionable," said Mrs. Barnes. "And since clothing is becoming more and more out of reach all the time, this is a practical way of keeping up on fashion.

"These uniforms look almost like street wear. They are very easy care, come in all sorts of terrific fabrics and colors, and can be tossed into the washing machine to help you get your week's wear ready all at once."

Mrs. Barnes, whose company also has branches in Vancouver and Nanaimo, says there was a time not long ago when no one in Victoria sold uniforms.

"When they did appear, there were only two styles offered. These were all bought up and everybody in town looked the same."

Now, she said, there are wide assortments of pant suits, skirts and tops — and a full range of colors.

Nationally the uniform market also appears to be doing well.

Last year Sainthill Levine had a $2-million increase in sales — the largest in 15 years.

Other companies report less spectacular gains, but most agree the uniform business has grown between 60 and 80 per cent in the last decade.

Some may see the trend to uniforms as an ominous threat, a sign of society marching its way toward a color-coded Brave New World. Others see it like both Gibson and Mrs. Barnes — as a practical alternative, saving the employee clothing dollars while creating a clean, "corporate image" for the employer.

One view is that in an age of increasing fragmentation and alienation, many people feel they need to belong to a group identified by a uniform.

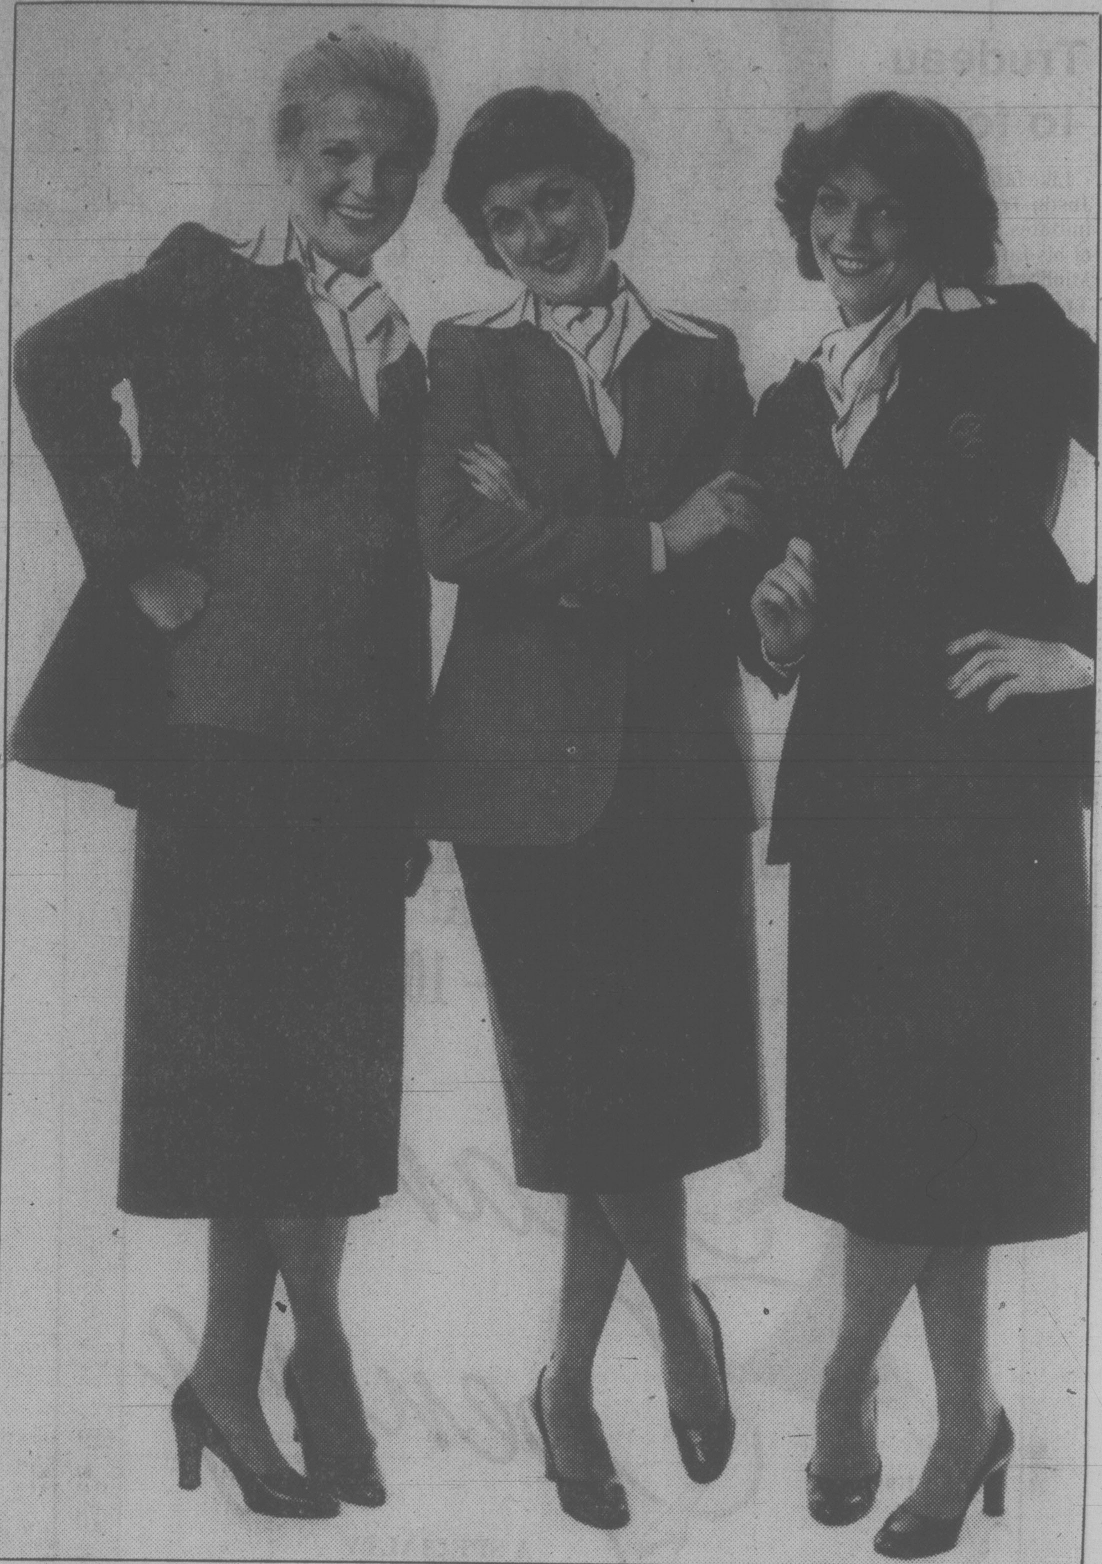
While we're used to seeing service industry employees in uniform, the latest trend sees banks starting to outfit their workers in what the trade euphemistically calls "career apparel."

Although uniforms can save an employee up to $1,000 a year and rule out the possibility of competition over clothes, the trend may have a deeper significance.

"Each new shift into uniforms is an indication of two conflicting elements in the 20th century," said John Parikhal, a lifestyles consultant for Joint Communications Corp.

The two elements, he says are: "The move toward fragmentation and the attempt to offset this by belonging to a group."

He says that most uniforms have a military cut and "present the concept of order and control. There's a desperate need in our society for order and control."



TODAY'S UNIFORM shows more uniformity than uniform. As shown here in three outfits issued to Air Canada female in-flight personnel, you can hardly tell a uniform from normal styles. At left, the navy blue uniform and red vest of the female in-charge; centre the red jacket and navy vest of the female flight service director and right, the all navy uniform of the flight attendant.

Designer in the swim

TORONTO (CP) — It was a toss-up between menswear and bathing suits.

The two don't have much in common, but they were always major interests for Biljana Baker.

And so the Canadian designer for Rose Marie Reid, an international swimwear company, has set aside menswear, at least for now.

"I'm happy to have been able to concentrate on at least one of my top choices," said the 27-year-old native of Yugoslavia, who has spent the last 15 years in Toronto.

Only four years after graduating from a fashion-design course at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute, she is responsible for a 250-garment line of swimsuits and cover-ups.

She designs 80 different swimsuit and cover-up styles for Rose Marie Reid and 45 designs for Dotti.

For Baker, the fascination with swimwear is rather contradictory.

"I like the challenge of the Lycra, which is a four-stretch fabric," she said in a recent interview. "You can never get a pattern right the first time, you always have to do it twice."

"On the other hand, I always liked bathing suits because they don't have too many facings and interfacings."

Her swimsuit and cover-up line for Rose Marie Reid is made from Italian Lycra and nylon, and is produced in Italy.

Baker goes there with designs in mind, chooses fabric and has sketches produced. Samples are made up in Italy and sent to Canada.

"We go to Italy for the fabric because they have an excellent dyeing program there. The Lycra used for bathing suits and the nylon for the cover-ups are dyed to match absolutely perfectly."

For her 60-piece cover-up line under the Dotti label, she buys the fabric in the United States and the garments are manufactured here. The fabric is cheaper in the U.S.

The one-piece suit or strapless maillot will be the biggest seller in the coming months.

Baker said the one-piece suits are simply more flattering than the bikini for most women.

"A bikini is flattering to a young, very good figure," she said. "If you're short, the two-piece suit can cut you in half. Also the one-piece suit can hide some of those lumps and bumps that most women have."

Returning to alcohol is a risky move

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

I've been an alcoholic from the time I was 20 until I was 45. I'm now 62 and I look back at those years as a constant nightmare. My total life would have gone down the drain had it not been for the support that I received from my wife and two children.

I'm everlastingly grateful to them, even though I still can't understand why they put up with me. In the years that I have been free from alcohol, I have flourished as a human being, as a husband and as a father. Modestly, I believe that my contribution to my community has been significant. I was able to go back to college at 45 and get my master's degree two years later. This never would have happened if I were still drinking.

Now, Dr. Coleman, as an avid reader of your columns, I want to enlist your help. A recent report stated that some alcoholics who have been able to abstain from alcohol for four years can now safely return to social drinking.

Whatever their fancy statistics are, I say, as an alcoholic, once an alcoholic, always an alcoholic, and it is a cruel, irresponsible thing to tempt controlled alcoholics in this way.

Mr. K.

Dear Mr. K.:

Your well-formulated letter pours sincerity from one who has suffered the ravages of alcoholism. That you have survived the devastation of this chronic disease is a testimonial to you and your family and to whatever outside sources of support you called upon.

Alcoholism is a family and community disease. The havoc of destruction wrought by this illness can hardly be measured, because the dispersion of its damage is so great. No one who is near, or even remotely associated with, an alcoholic is spared the anguish of this problem.

I agree thoroughly with you. Even if there were the slightest possibility that one single person, freed of the yoke of alcoholism, could return to a pattern of moderate drinking, it would be an overwhelming mistake to contemplate such an idea.

The "return to social drinking" is a very precarious temptation. Every alcoholic knows the dangers of the insidious increase of alcoholic intake, once he or she has returned to that vague concept of "social drinking."

The fact that a "certain number" of alcoholics can return to moderate drinking is an interesting bit of statistical information. Yet, the major question that must be presented to these research workers is, "Can you anticipate just who will be among that 'certain number'? Can you predict who will become a 'social drinker' and who will again become an uncontrolled alcoholic?"

the collectors

By KEN RICHARDSON

Coin-operated amusement and gambling machines began sweeping North America around the turn of the century with Herman S. Mills prominently promoting the idea through a string of arcades. The most revolutionary slot of the period in the U.S. was the Liberty Bell, so called because of the bell symbols on the reels and case. It presented three independent spinning wheels actuated by a horizontal arm, pulled by the player.

Three symbols in the shape of spades, hearts, and diamonds, as well as bells and lucky horseshoes stopped in a line visible through a glass window at the top of the machine. Winning combinations paid off in nickels down the chute. In 1925 a large glass-covered compartment filled to the brim with nickels and right up front for the player to observe proved a powerful lure.

Dual jackpot drawers were added later to sustain client interest. In the 1940s law enforcement became stricter and candy machines were made with the appearance of a slot machine; the cash payout was just a bonus to a bonafide purchase. Ultimately, three buttons were added to allow the player to stop the reels individually, in any chosen order.

Where to look?

With due regard to legal sanction and that your interest in them is that of a collector "slots" can surface at special showings, in company with other 20th century artifacts. Country antique stores have yielded some interesting specimens. Occasionally, a restorable model can be found in a flea market.

Buying tips:

While Mills are popular the Watling, Evans, Pace, Caille and Rock-Ola are all makes to keep in mind. Machines should be operational. Remove the back and examine for rust and any serious deterioration of parts.

Mainly about values:

Four-figure prices for early Mills are not unusual.

Q. How can I recognize a Clichy weight? D.B.

A. Pink or White Rose incorporated into pattern. Sometimes marked 'Clichy' or just a plain 'C'.

Dear Mr. Vichert: I have a reputation of being a fighter. My best friend and I are known to one and all as the demolition squad.

My problem is I don't want the reputation anymore. I'm 13 and in Grade 8. When I go into high school I want to be known as a girl, not a tomboy. How do I change my reputation? I have a quick temper and get headaches which we think are clusters. My father has them, and our symptoms are remarkably similar.

Answer: The best example of your growing maturity is your desire to find some way of handling your disagreements other than fighting. You have already taken a big step in solving your problem by deciding that you don't want to continue behaving the way that you have in the past. Since you and your best friend have a joint reputation it could be the easiest method to change this reputation if you both work together.

Talk it over with your friend and see if she would like to stop fighting also. If she agrees then you can help each other.

Let the other person, the one you want to fight, know you are angry; say what you think, and then, if necessary, walk away. Beating someone up doesn't prove that you are right. It only proves that you are stronger.

Dear Dr. Levine: I am a 17-year-old female and I have just recently begun getting really interested in guys. Or maybe I should say that I've always been interested, but the guys never seemed to be before. Just lately things have started to get serious. I've had two close encounters with two guys.

The first guy meant nothing to me and I'm still not sure how I ended up almost going to bed with him.

The second guy was different because we've known each other for almost three years but we were just friends until about two weeks ago. He lives out of town, so that's why things were going so slow. Last time when he came to visit, everything was different.

I'm not sure if I'm ready for an intimate relationship like that. While we were making out my body responded, but my mind didn't. Is this just because I'm relatively inexperienced or am I doomed to be a "cold" person all my life?

Answer: Your letter brings up a number of points which bear examining. You are obviously sexually inexperienced, and as time goes on you will discover most of the answers to your questions on your own.

You say that you almost had sex with one boy, but that you don't know "how" it happened. I suggest that you examine closely what exactly transpired that night. I predict you'll be able to work out how it was that you came so close. Unless it was attempted rape — and it certainly doesn't sound that way — then you likely played a major role.

It's no accident that these "things" are starting to happen. You are changing, both in body and in mind. And it is also not unusual for there to be a discrepancy between the two, especially at your stage of life.

Your body is responding to basic biological drives and needs, but your mind is full of conflicting thoughts, values, prohibitions, and desires. At some point in time all of these will "gel" and an exciting love relationship will evolve. This hasn't happened to you as yet. You are not "doomed" to be sexually unresponsive all your life.

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel including Marion Powell, physician; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and social worker Bruce Vichert.

Nine-to-five work day decreasing

TORONTO (CP) — If a current trend continues, the nine-to-fiver will soon have had his day as the basic unit of the labor force.

The number of employees who can choose their own hours is increasing under programs known as flexitime, opt-time, Flextime, compressed work week, rearranged work week or 5-5-4 (two five-day weeks and one four-day week in each cycle).

Petroleum and insurance firms have led the way, but many other companies with large office staffs are adopting the idea, too.

"Most large oil companies started it at the same time," said Marcel Blais, co-ordinator of industrial relations research for Imperial Oil Ltd. of Toronto, which closes every third Friday.

Shell Canada Ltd. introduced flexible working hours in 1973 and added a 5-5-4 system last summer.

"It seemed to be a timely thing to get into," said Robert Bullock, personnel manager for the corporate offices in Toronto.

The idea started in the oil companies' refineries, Blais said, and was adopted first by offices in Western Canada.

The Alberta Board of Industrial Relations, which must approve changes if employees work more than eight days in a row or 44 hours in a week, issued approximately 300 permits last year, spokesman Ron Collins said.

As many as 20,000 workers are affected under those proposals in addition to others uncounted because they do not fall under the board's jurisdiction.

Although personnel managers could not say precisely where the idea originated, all agreed that there are positive benefits for the company.

Employees are strongly in favor of the idea, they said.

Reduced absenteeism and improvements in punctuality, productivity and morale are the most immediate results.

Eric Broadhurst, director of employee relations at Honeywell Information Systems, a division of Honeywell Ltd. of Toronto, said the flexible hours allow the company to use manpower more effectively because of the peaks and troughs in some operations.

Another company that has benefited from the trend is Heacon Canada Ltd.

Through its Flextime division, Heacon markets the hardware to record the hours worked by its clients' employees.

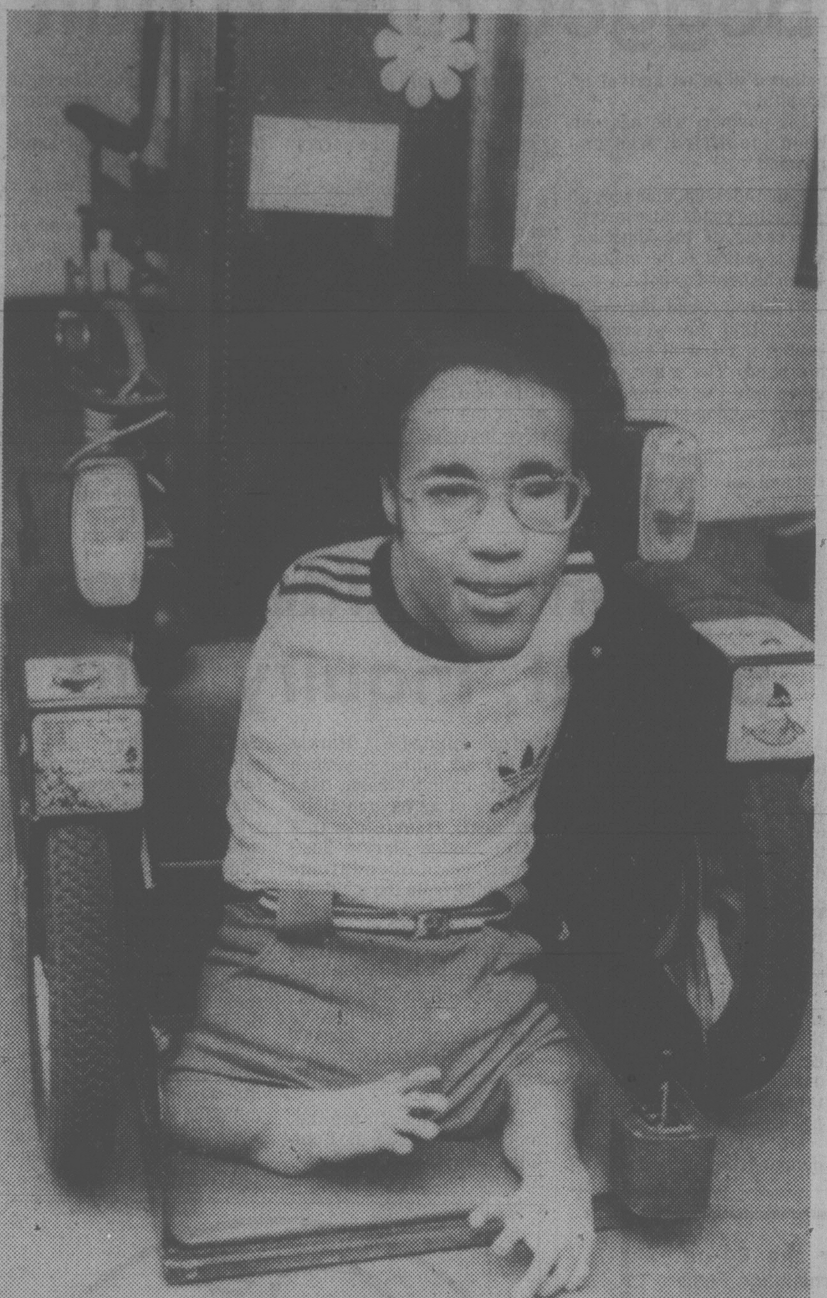
The company developed the system in West Germany after the Second World War and began selling it in Canada in 1972.

John Lemme, a Flextime consultant and salesman, said that between 40 and 60 per cent of the working population in Europe use the system, but growth here has been slow.

"We make money on the equipment, but we must sell the concept first."

Flextime benefits employees as well as employers, he said. Employees become responsible for their own working hours and the quality of working life improves.

"After three months' trial, most people that were against it are for it."



THALIDOMIDE VICTIM Terry Wiles, 18, is shown aboard the special cart which gives him mobilityin a New York City hotel room. "People just don't realize that a handicapped person in a wheelchair is at a permanent height," he says. Wiles, who is from England, apears in an upcoming PBS television program detailing his struggle and that of others deformed as the result of the tranquilizing drug.

'I made a choice to go on living'

By MALCOLM N. CARTER

NEW YORK (AP) — Long before most youngsters even consider the meaning of death, Terry Wiles considered taking his own life.

Wiles, now 18, was born — as he once put it — a Frankenstein monster: without arms, without his left eye, without anything more than flipper-like appendages for legs. His mother abandoned him.

He is among the tragic victims of thalidomide, a tranquillizer given to pregnant women until scientists finally grasped its connection to gross birth deformities.

"I made a choice to go on living," he said during a pause while shopping for horror books in a midtown bookstore here. "It didn't happen suddenly."

With his adoptive parents and sister, Wiles is visiting New York, Washington and California from his home in Huntingdon, England, to publicize a U.S. Public Broadcasting Service docudrama called On Giant's Shoulders. Underwritten by Exxon, the program will be broadcast the second week of March.

Originally shown on BBC-TV, the 90-minute program, in which Wiles plays himself, won a 1979 international Emmy Award and has the endorsement of the National Education Association.

The London Daily Telegraph called it "a play which will stick in the memory long after most of today's television drama has been forgotten."

Wiles — now a freshman at Huntingdon Technical College and contemplating a career as a ficton writer — said death was an all-too-familiar denizen of the children's hospital where he spent his early years. Other grotesquely handicapped children there had constant surgery and pain, emotional as well as physical, he said.

So Wiles considers it natural that by the time he was six he was contemplating suicide.

But how a boy who couldn't dress himself, couldn't wash himself and couldn't raise himself upright would find a way to kill himself was a question Wiles never had to answer.

By then, the truck driver who would adopt Wiles, give him a new name and free him from the torturous artificial limbs of his childhood had entered his life.

Leonard Wiles, 69, and his wife, Hazel, 49, adopted Terry in 1971.

"Without his car, he's like a little frog hopping around," said Wiles, who invented the combination fork-lift truck and carnival bumper cart in which Terry now gets around.

"Frog!" Terry exclaimed good-naturedly. "Don't say that — it doesn't sound nice. It's demeaning."

His adoptive father endured sleepless, heatless nights and hungry days to save the money to develop a succession of such "supercars."

But whatever he lacks physically, Terry Wiles makes up for in personality. Astride his latest self-propelled supercar, he easily disarmed the legions who stopped to gawk and stare in New York City.

Of the film, the book on which it is based and all the attendant publicity, he said: "It's for other people, not me, shedding light on other handicapped people. People just don't realize that a handicapped person in a wheelchair is at a permanent height. My doing this I think will help."

Wiles concedes he likes being a celebrity. Likes the idea of starring at a luncheon of the President's Committee on Unemployment of the Handicapped. Likes being invited on a VIP tour of the White House.

But none of that can make up for his disabilities.

"Handicapped is not an advantage, is it?" he said. "Crippled is not an advantage."

Mung bean sprouts are one of the prime ingredients in chop suey. The best part about mung beans is that they can be grown in a shallow dish without soil. If kept moist, they will be ready to eat in 3 to 5 days.

This is just a sample of the many growing tips which you'll find in George Park's 1980 catalogue. Along with planting instructions for each conventional fruit and vegetable, the offers information on new varieties that have been developed. You can start planning your garden with the aid of this free 130-page publication.

Shot guard's family begged him to quit

MONTREAL (CP) — For years, Raymond Vince's family badgered him to quit his job as a Brink's security guard because it was too dangerous.

On Monday Vince, 55, was shot and killed in front of horrified shoppers during a routine cash pickup in a downtown shopping mall while two gunmen wearing Hallowe'en masks escaped with between $15,000 and $18,000 in cash.

Store clerk Nancy Simmons was in the mall when the shooting occurred shortly before 10 a.m.

"I saw him (Vince) walking by and he said good morning to me. Then I heard the shot and I turned and saw him fall," she said, fighting back tears.

"I went rushing over and someone was holding him, and there was blood gushing out all over."

Vince, an employee of Brink's Canada Ltd. for 32 years, was shot in the chest and shoulder. He was pronounced dead on arrival at hospital.

His partner, who has not been identified, was unharmed.

Bob Anderson, manager of a sporting goods store next to the scene of the shooting, was standing at the counter when he heard a shot.

"I turned round and saw a small, thin guy wearing a rubber mask with a sack in his hand. The other guard dived into the corner and I heard two pop-pops," he recalled.

"It was enough to scare the hell out of you, I can tell you that."

Witnesses said four or five shots were fired. The guards were ambushed in the mall, just after turning the corner towards a street exit.

"It's a terrible thing to have happen just for money," said Vince's sister-in-law Myrtle Clayton.

She described Vince as "a real family man." He was married with three children, the youngest of whom is 18.

Mrs. Clayton said Vince's wife had always worried about her husband. He had been involved in one holdup before but was not injured, she added.

A Brink's official said the company would be offering a reward for information leading to capture of the bandits, but he didn't know the exact amount.

The company is offering a $100,000 reward for information on the last shooting of one of its guards. Maurice Prudhomme, 30, of Hull, Que. was killed in December in a holdup that netted four masked gunmen $400,000. Police are still looking for the suspects.

And last August, security guard Bernard Babeu, 50, of Alliance Securite Blindee, was killed making a money delivery to a credit union in the CBC headquarters here.

Old hotel razed

DAWSON CITY, Yukon (CP) — A fire early Monday destroyed the Downtown Hotel, a wooden structure built in 1905.

RCMP said the fire started in the laundry room. The hotel's three guests and about half a dozen patrons in the hotel's saloon escaped. No injuries were reported.

Carbon dioxide given patient, inquiry told

CALGARY (CP) — Doctors at Foothills Hospital in Calgary mistakenly gave a surgery patient carbon dioxide instead of oxygen, a fatality inquiry was told Monday.

Arthur Chowen, 82, of Medicine Hat died Sept. 10, 1979, minutes after an operation for respiratory problems.

Dr. Michael Schneider, who performed the operation, said it was partly successful but the patient came out of it still needing assistance from a ventilator supplying oxygen.

Dr. Charles Steen, resident anesthetist, told provincial court Judge W.J. Harvie he did not notice a carbon dioxide cylinder being used in place of an oxygen cylinder until after Chowen's death. Judge Harvie postponed recommendations stemming from the incident.

Dr. Steen and others testified gas cylinders are colored grey for carbon dioxide and white or green for oxygen, as well as being "pin-coded." The pin-coding means a regulator for one type of gas will not fit onto a cylinder containing another gas.

Dr. Charles Lampard, medical director at Foothills, and Donald McIsaac, hospital technician, testified an adaptor had been attached to an oxygen regulator in order to make it fit a carbon dioxide cylinder. It was not determined why the adaptor had been fitted or by whom.

Dr. Steen said Dr. George Clark, Foothills anesthetist supervising his work, had brought the carbon dioxide cylinder into the operating room when the oxygen cylinder in use began to run low.

An oxygen regulator was already fitted onto it. Dr. Steen realized afterward the cylinder was grey, but denied his grey-green color blindness may have played a part in the incident.

SHAPE UP FOR SPRING WITH THE HELP OF THE no nonsense DIET

In May of 1979 Natures own no nonsense diet was introduced to British Columbians and Albertans through the Prince Health Food chain. Within weeks they were sold out and by the end of July thousands of people had lost weight the no nonsense way.

Unlike most diets to have come along this one is not dying out, but gaining greater momentum all the time. The reason for this phenomenal growth lies inthe fact that those people who have tried the diet have gotten positive results. For example I know of one particular young lady who has been overweight nearly all of her life. She wanted desperately to lose 25 lbs., and tried every possible means over the last two years. She exercised, joined clubs and went to monthly meetings. All to no avail. After reading about the no nonsense diet, she decided to give it a try before throwing in the towel. It worked. Within a month she lost 23 lbs., within two more weeks she lost another 10 lbs. She is so ecstatic about this diet that she preaches it to anyone who will listen and has most of her friends on it.

The product is a dieter's dream; two tablespoons in a glass of partially skimmed milk is equal in nutrition to a complete meal. But without all those nasty little calories. It has all the essential amino acids, and Vitamins and Minerals in a delicious powder base. The no nonsense formula comes in two flavours, luscious chocolate and tasty vanilla.

Here is a list of the Vitamins and Minerals it contains:

Vitamin A Thiamin
Choline
Iodine
Potassium
Vitamin E
Riboflavin
Calcium Magnesium
Manganese
Vitamin C
Niacin B6, B12
Phosphorous
Copper
Sodium
Vitamin D
Folid Acid Biotin
Iron
Zinc
d-Panothenic Acid

This is a wonderful diet because you are dealing with natural foods and not drugs, consequently it is safe and very healthy. A lot of people after going on this diet, have noticed remarkable improvement in their hair, skin and nails.

Song-writing janitor up for Grammy

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI) — Johnny Mullins heads for Hollywood and a possible Grammy award this week, temporarily leaving behind a broom he's pushed for the past 23 years as janitor of the Wilder Elementary School.

"If this could lead to enough jobs where I could write songs full time, I'd like nothing better," Mullins said. "But if not, I figure I've got about six more years left of sweeping floors."

Mullins' wife and 17-year-old daughter will accompany him to California, his first trip there in more than a quarter century. Mullins also will wear a tuxedo for the first time in his life.

Mullins, 56, is one of five persons nominated in the Best Country Song of the Year category. He wrote "Blue Kentucky Girl," which was recorded by Emmylou Harris and which peaked at sixth place in the national surveys.

"I had never really thought about ever winning a Grammy," Mullins said. "It kind of floored me when I got a Mailgram from Warner Brothers telling me I'd been nominated."

Mullins has been writing songs since he was 18 and has had 41 of his songs recorded over the years.

Since Mullins received notice of the nomination, he has received considerable attention. He was treated to a surprise assembly at his school, where teachers, students and the Parent Teachers Association presented him with more than $450 to make the trip to California for the awards presentation.

EXTENSION OF SERVICE TO NORTHERN AND REMOTE COMMUNITIES: NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETINGS

In its Public Announcement of January 8, 1980, the Commission announced the formation of a committee which will issue a report on how the number of television services to northern and remote communities in Canada might best and most expeditiously be increased and be more varied. It was also stated in the Announcement that the Committee would conduct a public meeting in the National Capital Region commencing 25 March 1980 and additional public meetings in one or more other locations in Canada, particularly in the North.

The Meeting in the National Capital Region will be held at Centre des Conferences/Conference Center, Phase 4, 140 Promenade du Portage, Hull, Quebec.

The Committee has for now decided to hold public meetings in two northern communities. The first public meeting will take place in Baker Lake, N.W.T. on Thursday, 28 February 1980 at the Resources Center commencing 10:00 A.M. The second public meeting will take place in Whitehorse, Yukon on Saturday 1 March 1980 at the Travelodge Hotel, 2nd Avenue and Woods Street, commencing 10:00 A.M.

Members of the general public and interested parties who wish to present submissions or comments at either of these two public meetings should register with the Secretary at least one hour before the meeting starts. Copies of the January 8th Announcement which outlines the issues under discussion will soon be available at the Hamlet Council Office in Baker Lake and at the Chamber of Commerce Office, 302 Steele Street, Whitehorse.

Opening lead — eight of spades.

The defenders usually have more to think about than the declarer — because they don't see each other's hands and consequently have only a partial view of their combined resources. Declarer, however, seeing dummy's cards and his own, is in a much better position to assess his strong and weak points and to take advantage of the knowledge he possesses and the opponents do not.

East had a problem of sorts when he won the spade lead after declarer had followed low from dummy. But correctly he decided there was no future in a spade continuation. Accordingly, he shifted to a low club, thus sounding the death knell for declarer's chances.

South played low, West taking the eight and returning a low club to the king. There was no recovery for South, whatever he did, and eventually he lost a spade, three clubs and a diamond to go down one.

East unquestionably earned his success by abandoning spades and shifting to a club at trick two, but actually he should never have had the opportunity to beat the contract. South erred grievously when he ducked the spade lead in dummy. He was asking for trouble and he got it!

The bidding and opening lead had clearly marked East with the king of spades. It was therefore unnecessary to protect the queen by playing low from dummy. There was more pressing business at hand.

Dummy's diamonds were screaming for attention — before declarer's weak spot in clubs could be exploited. South should have gone up with the ace of spades at trick one and attacked diamonds at trick two. That was the correct order of procedure and it would have led to nine easy tricks.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, February 27, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Find 'openings' — means look beyond traditional methods, procedures. Recent social contacts can prove valuable. Someone is going to unlock doors for you, possibly a Sagittarian or a Gemini. A young, vigorous, romantic native thinks you have 'everything!'

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Utilize lessons learned in recent past. Applies especially to property, long-range projects, dealings with older family members. Check details, be aware of small print and obligations incurred as result of borrowing and lending.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on special activities which include short trips, special reports, favors to relatives who may be making quick changes in their plans. Another Gemini, a Virgo and a Sagittarian could figure in scenario.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Check Taurus message for valuable hint. Get money's worth. Make intelligent concession to family member, but maintain balance of budget. Accent on locating lost articles, getting valid appraisals, taking special precautions to protect valuables.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Insist on realistic offer. Don't sell yourself short. Lunar cycle is such that you can be at right place at right time. Pisces, Virgo persons figure prominently. Define meanings, decide on course of action based on chance for progress.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Work with material at hand. Added pressure, responsibility actually leads to opportunity for greater emotional and financial security. You gain valuable glimpse behind the scene. Older individual shares 'privileged information.'

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can strike chord of universal appeal. Popularity increases, emphasis on friends, hopes and wishes. Members of opposite sex find you especially attractive — and there will be no secret about it. Aries and another Libran figure prominently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A 'new deal' brings you opportunity for new starts in new directions. Highlight independence, originality and creative endeavors. Spotlight on superiors, ambitions, reputation and special civic duties. Leo, Aquarius persons figure in scenario.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Intuitive intellect works overtime; you perceive potential and you learn by teaching. Accent on journey, language and dissemination of information. You receive favorable response to inquiry made weeks ago. This might lead to special publication.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Money affecting one close to you, including mate or partner, is spotlighted. Be flexible. Avoid scattering forces. Expand base of operations. Study Sagittarius message for valuable hint. Profit shown if you dig beneath superficial indications.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be specific regarding legal formalities, special rights and permissions. Obtain hint from Taurus message. Make concessions to one who proved loyalty in recent past. What appeared a defeat could boomerang in your favor. Know it, avoid singing the blues.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Low key approach brings desired results. Emphasis on basic issues, employment, combining forces with one who shares your interests. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure in scenario. You win a major point and 'services' improves as result.

IF FEBRUARY 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, contacts, efforts made last year wil bear fruit, especially in June. In March, forces tend to be scattered as you expand activity and make new social contacts. You are sensitive, psychic and people are drawn to you when there is a crisis. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in your life. You appear easy-going, but you can be aggressive when cause is right. You are fascinated with the theater, law and medicine.

No oil port: Kennedy

SEATTLE (AP) — Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts said Monday he opposes construction of an oil pipeline from Washington state to Minnesota and would rather see an all-land route to transport Alaskan oil to the U.S. Mid-West.

Kennedy's position is in direct conflict with that of President Jimmy Carter, who has eendorsed the Northern Tier pipeline proposal which involves shipment of oil along the Pacific coast to a port in Washington state and movement through an all-American pipeline eastward.

"I am opposed to the Northern Tier pipeline because it presents a serious threat to the ecology of Puget Sound," Kennedy said in a news statement put out by his Washington state campaign office. Kennedy was in New Hampshire campaigning for today's Democratic presidential primary there.

A Kennedy spokesman added that the Carter decision was made without adequate consultation with people and agencies of the Washington state.

"Accidents are inevitable," Kennedy said. "These accidents would be devastating to Washington's fishing industry and to the unique character of Puget Sound, the Strait of Juan de Fuca and the state's incomparable Pacific Coast beaches."

Kennedy said he continues to support an all-land pipeline to the East, "when sufficient supplies and needs can be proven."

He also said that alternatives to Northern Tier that make use of existing routes are likely to transport oil to the U.S. Midwest more cheaply and more quickly than Northern Tier.

Pierre Trudeau, Liberal party leader and prime minister-designate following last Monday's federal election, has said he would favor an all-land pipeline route through Canada that would largely parallel the Alaska Highway.

The Liberals opposed increased tanker traffic down the Pacific coast in the federal election campaign.

Bank employee killed

SEATTLE (AP) — An elderly bank employee was shot and killed today during a holdup at a branch of the Prudential Mutual Savings Bank in Seattle, police said.

The employee, said to be in his 70s but whose identity was not released, was shot after an apparent confrontation with the holdup man.

The victim was rushed to Harborview Medical Center after witnesses and a doctor at the bank performed first-aid and cardio-pulmonary resuscitation.

The man was pronounced dead in the emergency room about an hour after the shooting, at about 9:30 a.m., Tina Mankowski, hospital spokesman, said.

Lee Libby, a police spokesman, said the robber walked into the bank with a pistol drawn and a ski mask pulled over his face.

After obtaining an undisclosed amount of money, the man fired at least one shot and dashed out of the bank, escaping in a pickup truck. Police later found the truck abandoned about six blocks from the bank.

Public trial plea again by Sakharov

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Banished Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, in a statement released here today, made a fresh call to Soviet authorities to try him publicly for his alleged crimes against the state.

The 58-year-old physicist said in his statement, read to reporters by his wife, Elena Bonner, that he is ready to stand before an open court "knowing that in a just state only a court can determine measures and form of punishment."

A Nobel Peace Prize laureate and focal point for dissidence in the Soviet Union, Sakharov was stripped of all state honors accorded him for his scientific work and banished to the Volga River city of Gorky on Jan. 22.

He was officially accused of subversive activities against the state, but no formal charge has been laid against him.

Prepare bed of sandy soil for early planting, sowing gardening

jack beastall

A few days of sunshine and warm daytime temperatures brings the urge to start digging and sowing.

It is then we all envy the gardener with a well drained sandy soil. But by June that lucky gardener will be wishing he had our heavier soil which retains moisture and supports crops through the heat of summer.

Most of us could have a patch of early soil if we care to go to the trouble of making it, and some home gardeners have a special sheltered corner or border designed for late winter and early spring working.

This same patch can often be used for heat-loving summer vegetables after the early spring crops have been harvested. Therefore, it pays for the labor expended in its preparation.

One such border was made 17 years ago and is still in use.

It is only 60 cms wide, extending along a back fence which is tightly boarded, and on the south-west side open to full sun.

When it was prepared the top soil was removed, the clay subsoil well broken and mixed with short lengths of tree prunings and wild willow to keep it open and improve the drainage. This part of the work was done in early spring.

During the following summer, stones, broken brick, broken clay pots and chinaware, crushed tin cans, and pieces of old galvanized pipe and metal were added to a depth of 20 cms over the entire base. This formed drainage material that would not quickly rot, and the metals still provide trace elements as they break down.

In September, before the rainy season started, this "garbage dump" was covered with the original top soil mixed with an equal amount of screened compost, decayed manure, or mushroom compost.

Some old planks about 5 cms thick and 20 cms wide where used to hold this extra height of soil in place and form a raised bed.

Each fall, soon after the first rains have moistened the surface, the border is dressed with compost, or decayed manure, to maintain the height and add humus; seaweed is spread on top of the dressing as collected over winter.

As soon as weather is suitable in late February to early March, a staggered double row of early dwarf peas is sown at the back of the border against the fence, and a row of early potato sets planted in front.

The peas are consumed by early summer, leaving an ideal spot against the fence for tomatoes which have been grown-on in pots and are in flower with some first fruits set when planted out.

As the early potatoes are gathered the space is used for vegetables such as okra, eggplant, and sweet pepper, all of which revel in the warmth of this prepared border.

Not all of us have the same ideal layout to develop, but most of us could find some corner that could be converted if we earnestly wanted a piece of soil to satisfy the February urge to dig and sow.

Money Talk

A series in which Montreal Trust answers your questions.

"RRSP- in my name or my wife's?"

"My wife does voluntary work for a charity organization and has no taxable income. What would be the advantages of setting up an RRSP in her name, in addition to the one I already have in my own?"

In situations like yours, where there are differences in income earned, there are advantages to having the spouse with the higher income contribute to the RRSP of the spouse with the lower income. One of the main advantages is that on maturity, retirement income received from an RRSP is taxable in the hands of the plan owner.

In your case, if you split that taxable income between you and your wife, you can both benefit from the $1,000 annual exemption for retirement annuity payments. You may also gain from lower tax rates that you each pay on the retirement income. So, all in all, your combined after-tax income when you're retired can be boosted significantly.

A few things to note, though, before proceeding. First, remember that the sum of the contributions you're making must not amount to more than your personal maximum. Secondly, bear in mind that if you or your wife want to deregister the plan for anything other than the purchase of a retirement income annuity, the withdrawals will be applied to your income and taxed accordingly (to the extent of your contributions in the year of withdrawal and the two preceding years). Thirdly, it goes without saying, that any money you contribute to your wife's RRSP then belongs by law to your wife.

Each couple's circumstances are, of course, different. At Montreal Trust we'll be pleased to explain how a spousal RRSP can be set up to meet your particular situation.

RRSP maximum contributions

"What's the maximum I can contribute to an RRSP in any one year?"

You don't say if you contribute to a company pension plan or not.

If you do, your contribution to your own RRSP, plus your personal contribution to your company pension plan, together may not exceed $3,500 or 20% of your earned income, whichever is the lesser.

If you don't belong to any company pension plan, you may deposit up to $5,500 or 20% of your earned income, whichever is the lesser.

If you have any questions about our services, write, call, or come in and see us at the address below.

Rhodesia girds for vote violence

Times News Services

SALISBURY — Salisbury and other Rhodesian cities have been turned into armed fortresses in an attempt to prevent violence in the country's three-day independence elections which start Wednesday.

Truckloads of troops are being ferried around the streets, roadblocks ring the outer suburbs and armed policemen patrol central shopping areas.

It is the final attempt by Rhodesia's administrators to ensure that the elections will be free and fair — a primary objective of last December's London agreement on Rhodesia which brought the seven year guerrilla war to an end.

The British governor, Lord Soames, on Monday banned all political meetings from the time the polls open until after the results have been declared.

Most of the white pedestrians were women left behind while husbands and sons reported for temporary duty in the security forces to provide protection for the voters in the three-day polling opening Wednesday.

Soames will give an eve-of-poll address to the nation on radio and television tonight and is expected to assure voters that they will be voting in total secrecy and to urge all parties to refrain from intimidation.

Political leaders of all nine parties contesting the elections are each being given two minutes of radio time tonight for their final attempts to secure votes.

The election results are not expected to be known until March 5, officials said.

Both guerrilla leaders have called for arrangements to be made for a unified army in advance of an independence government taking over, probably next month, but the British favor allowing details of the formation of a new army to be left to the new government.

Bishop Abel Muzorewa reflected the nervousness in advance of what many consider a life-or-death poll to decide the long-term future of an independent Zimbabwe.

Surinam media muzzled

PARAMARIBO, Surinam (UPI) — Rebellious army troops who toppled the democratic government of Surinam today imposed censorship on news sent abroad and reportedly prohibited the arrival of international flights.

A spokesman for Surinam News Agency said in a telephone interview that troops were in his office and the offices of the local newspaper and were censoring all information. Attempts to reach the SNA by telex were unsuccesful.

"The situation is quiet," the official added.

He said the rebels blocked the arrival of flights from outside the country Monday after the coup but might allow flights to resume today.

Rebel spokesman said in a radio broadcast Monday night they wanted to set up a democratic government in Surinam.

Although initial rebel reports said six people were killed, the SNA official said the insurgents had revised the figure downward to four.

GM recall on brakes

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors is recalling some school bus chassis and trucks because of brake system problems the firm says have caused a few minor accidents.

About 55,000 1979 GMC and Chevrolet heavy-duty and medium-duty trucks would be recalled to replace front brake tubes that could fracture because of rattling in the system. Another 3,500 1976 bus chassis would be recalled to replace defective push rod assemblies that might cause loss of braking power.

RACING THE WATER, three men work on a makeshift levee around a house on the shore of Lake Elsinore in southern California where at one point the waters were rising at the rate of an inch per hour as runoff swelled the rivers into the lake. More than 70 houses were flooded and dozens of mobile homes damaged by the lake waters, rising after more than a week of steady rain. Forecasters predicte sunshine Wednesday, followed by more rain Thursday.

Tito's heir apparent called fiercely loyal

BELGRADE (AP) — Lazar Kolisevski, due to assume leadership of Yugoslavia's collective presidency if President Tito dies or steps down soon, is a long-time Communist stalwart with a reputation of being fiercely loyal to Tito.

Observers expect Kolisevski, 66, currently vice-president of the nine-member state presidency and a native of the southern republic of Macedonia, to follow scrupulously Tito's policies of independence from Moscow for the short period he might have the role.

Although widely known in Yugoslavia, Kolisevski would in no way enjoy the personal power and prestige of Tito even though he would become president.

Kolisevski's tenure as vice-president of the state presidency expires in May, and he would have to step down as head of the collective leadership body at that time if Tito has died or quit before then. If Tito is still president in May, under a rotating setup, the vice-presidency — and prospect of becoming president — would go next to Cvijetin Mijatovic, 65, a Bosnian.

KOLISEVSKI

Kolisevski would, however, remain a member of the presidency until his five-year term expires in 1982.

No matter who becomes president, he would become head of an intricate collective leadership which would make no decision without approval of all nine members.

Like Tito, Kolisevski joined the then-illegal Yugoslav Communist party before the Second World War. A former metal-worker, he became active in the movement while working in a Serbian arms factory.

After Yugoslavia surrendered to the Germans in 1941, the party's underground organization send Kolisevski back to his native Macedonia. The party secretary in the southern province had joined forces with the Bulgarian Communists, and the Yugoslav party hoped Kolisevski would stop the trend.

In September, 1941, the Soviet-based Communist International, which orchestrated the activities of European Communists, decided to return the Macedonian party to Yugoslav control.

Kolisevski became secretary of the Macedonian Communist party's executive committee and chief of the provincial military staff, with responsibility for organizing partisan bands loyal to Tito.

But some party members in the town of Skopje remained secretly loyal to the Bulgarian Communists, and in an effort to undermine Yugoslav control they turned Kolisevski in to the Bulgarian police in November, 1941.

Bulgaria, at the time allied with the Germans, had occupied Macedonia after the Nazi invasion.

Arabs protest Egypt-Israeli envoy swap

The Associated Press

Arabs marched and staged protest strikes today as Egypt's ambassador presented his credentials in Jerusalem and Israel's envoy was about to present his in Cairo to complete the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries.

Egyptian Ambassador Saad Murtada presented his credentials at the residence of Israel's president, Yitzhak Navon. An Israeli military honor guard was present and an Israeli band played Egypt's national anthem.

"We can provide a good example of co-existence in peace between the Israeli people and the Arab people in the area, something that will reduce for (the Arabs) the threat to their security and will ensure a just and lasting peace," Murtada said.

Israeli Ambassador Eliahu Ben-Elissar presented his credentials to President Anwar Sadat in Cairo.

"Let us vow to put an end to all suffering and misery," Sadat said. "Let us vow on this historic occasion to complete our sacred mission and make the peace process irreversible.

"Let every one of us light a candle of understanding and compassion. With God's help, we shall overcome," he said.

Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip closed their shops and offices to protest the exchange, but merchants in Gaza said that Israeli troops ordered them to reopen.

Schools, shops, banks, restaurants and cafes observed a two-hour strike in the Moslem sector of Beirut, Lebanon, and there were protest marches in other cities in southern and eastern Lebanon populated mainly by Moslems.

Traffic also came to a standstill throughout Syria for five minutes at mid-day. "This is a day of overwhelming disgrace," the official Syrian state radio said.

The official Sudanese Press Association called on Arab countries to declare "a day of national mourning."

Flood gets probation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former U.S. Representative Daniel Flood pleaded guilty today to conspiracy and was placed on a year's probation.

Flood (Dem.-Pa.) had been charged with conspiracy, bribery and perjury, but under a plea-bargain agreement with prosecutors he admitted being guilt only to conspiracy. The government agreed to drop the other, more serious, charges.

RCMP slated at crash probe

TORONTO (CP) — RCMP officers will be called to testify that reports concerning a plane crash which killed 43 persons two years ago were shredded to hide evidence, a lawyer told a federal inquiry into aviation safety Monday.

John Sopinka, chief counsel for the inquiry, said there is evidence that people investigating the crash of a PWA Boeing 737 at Cranbrook, B.C., on Feb. 11, 1978, acted improperly.

"There will be ... statements by persons involved in the investigation that documents were shredded because 'you cannot subpoena what does not exist' and that certain of them were 'not the kind of information that (the investigator) was prepared to hand over to anybody'."

Sopinka made the comments during opening remarks at the inquiry, headed by Mr. Justice Charles Dubin of the Ontario Appeals Court. The inquiry, entering its second phase, will study five air crashes.

It will study whether investigations should be independent of the federal department of transport, whether evidence from cockpit voice recorders should be privileged and whether those who report near-accidents should be protected from disciplinary action.

Parliament was mum as bureaucrats spent

By CAROL GOAR
FP News Service

OTTAWA Your MP can yell or save his arms in Parliament or complain bitterly but it won't do a bit of good.

In 35 days, the country will reach the end of an unprecedented fiscal year — the only one in recent memory in which elected representatives did not approve one cent of the more than $50 billion the government spent.

By the time Parliament meets in April, the 1979-80 fiscal year will already be history, the money will be gone and any MP wishing to challenge the administration's spending decisions will be out of luck.

"It's physically impossible for Parliament to vote on money that's already been spent," said one of the senior bureaucrats who has been busy safeguarding the keys to the national treasury during the unusual on-again-off-again election period.

Might be able to scream

"If somebody was violently opposed to what we did, he might be able to scream a bit in the Commons and win a few points on the 11 o'clock news, but that's about it."

The bureaucrats who have been managing the government's finances since last spring get all hot and bothered over suggestions that there is anything undemocratic about the situation.

They insist they've only been doing their jobs. Furthermore, they've been prudent and operated within both the letter and spirit of the law.

But in the privacy of their well-appointed 22nd floor headquarters of a downtown office tower, a few senior Treasury Board officials are chortling about what a pleasant year it's been without pesky MPs looking over their shoulders.

Life became tidy and predictable. The bureaucrats enjoyed doling out money to the various departments, without having to provide armloads of explanatory documents to the country's 282 MPs and without having to wait helplessly while Parliament went through its annual wrangle over the estimates.

Until a few days ago, most bureaucrats believed Prime Minister-elect Pierre Trudeau would call Parliament back into session before the end of the fiscal year (March 31) so MPs could at least go through the formality of rubber-stamping the estimates. But Trudeau said last week that he does not expect the new session to begin until early April.

Nothing unconstitutional

That means all 1979-80 government spending will have been under the Governor-General's authority instead of that of Parliament. There is nothing unconstitutional about such an arrangement. It is clearly spelled out in federal legislation that "when payment is urgently required for the public good " and no other source of funds is available, cabinet may approach the Governor General and request a special warrant.

But this usually happens for one or two months a year at most — during elections, summer breaks and other Parliamentary recesses. The measure was devised to keep the machinery of government running through such interruptions.

In April, when the first Governor General's warrant was requested, officials at Treasury Board fully expected that, as always, they'd use the emergency legislation until Parliament was back in session, then pass spending power back to MPs.

But the short-lived 31st Parliament never managed to approve the 1979-80 spending estimates. The figures were examined by MPs in several committees and debated briefly in the House of Commons, but before they could be passed, the country was plunged into an unexpected second election.

This meant not only that the initial string of Governor-General's warrants — worth $13.3 billion, covering the period from April 1 to mid-November — was left hanging, but also meant that another set of special warrants — whose value will add up to $5.3 billion by March 31 — would be needed to get the country through the rest of the fiscal year.

(This adds up to $18.6 billion. Actually the government spends about $50 billion a year, but 60 per cent of that is done without Parliament's specific authorization. Expenditures such as old age pensions, family allowances, welfare payments to the provinces and hundreds of other committments are laid down in law and take place automatically).

A Governor-General's warrant is obtained through a four-step process.

— The minister in charge of a department signs a special certificate stating how much money he needs and why.

— He submits the document to the president of the Treasury Board, who examines the request and adds his signature.

— The Treasury Board president, the cabinet minister who oversees all government spending, submits the request to his cabinet colleagues for approval.

— Cabinet asks the Governor General to sign a warrant freeing the money.

Blue book missing

This is quite unlike the normal Parliamentary process in which Treasury Board collects from each government department an estimate of how much money it will need for the coming year. The Treasury Board president then compiles these estimates into a huge blue book which he submits to Parliament. MPs break up into various committees and examine the estimates by department; questioning bureaucrats, going through the numbers with a fine-toothed comb and challenging any allocations which seem wasteful or unnecessary.

This happens four times a year - once for the main estimates and three times for supplementary estimates, modifying the main ones. It is a long, tedious process, but it does assure taxpayers, through their MPs, a say in the way the government spends their tax dollars.

If Parliament refuses to give the government the money it demands, it is automatically taken to be a vote of non-confidence. To reject a governing party's spending plans amounts to voting against that party's right to govern. The importance estimates are assigned in the survival of a Parliament shows that control of spending — at least in theory — is one of the fundamental duties of a democratically-elected Parliament.

Except last year. When MPs get settled into their new desks in the House of Commons in April, they will be treated to a detailed summary of how Treasury Board handed out billions of dollars, while they were too busy to notice.

Referendum wording faces challenge

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Liberal party is considering the possibility of launching a legal challenge to the question that will be asked in this spring's referendum on sovereignty-association.

Although the Liberals may only use the threat of legal action as a way of trying to force the Levesque government to modify the form of the question, party leader Claude Ryan has asked five lawyers to provide opinions on whether the question is legal.

Three of the legal opinions have already been received by Ryan, but he said in an interview Monday evening that he has not had time to read them as yet. Asked whether the party will challenge the question's legality, Ryan replied: "I have nothing to say about that this evening."

Although Ryan is holding his cards close to his chest on the delicate question of a legal challenge, a leading constitutional specialist in his party says the question is definitely illegal and provides an inviting target to any citizen who wants to challenge it.

Herbert Marx, elected in a November byelection in the Montreal riding of D'Arcy-McGee, said in an interview Monday that "a lot of people have been calling me recently who are concerned about the legality of the question.

"They have been asking me if we will challenge it," said Marx, who taught constitutional law for 10 years at the University of Montreal before moving into politics.

"The Liberal party hasn't decided yet whether it should go ahead but any individual could challenge the question — this type of thing cannot be controlled," he said, adding that "some of the people who have called have hinted that they are interested in challenging it."

Marx said that a legal challenge could be successfully launched because the referendum question is preceded by an explanation of what is meant by sovereignty-association.

"The law says the referendum question must be a question," Marx said emphatically. "It doesn't say there should be a question preceded by an explanation."

He called on Premier Levesque to ask for a ruling on the question's legality from the special referendum council — a panel of three provincial court judges that has exclusive jurisdiction to hear any judicial proceeding relating to a referendum.

Levesque also denounced the "galloping inefficiency" of federalism.

The premier said that the federal deficit in Canada, with its 23 million people, is roughly equal to the deficit of the United States, a country with 10 times the population.

DO YOU WANT

To move up in the world
To be free from contant repairs
To live in a nice area
To be near schools, churches, etc.
To be near recreation and shopping
To see your equity grow
To save money on heating costs
To be independent

If the answer is yes to any of the above questions then you must see the properties listed below today.

1. A 3 bdrm with custom designed interior and that large special family room off the kitchen in a semi-rural setting, some waterviews. Price $116,000 - Call WALLY KING.

2. A beautiful, fully developed, 3 bdrm bungalow on a quiet cul-de-sac yet so close to all amenities you won't believe it possible. Only $97,000 Call WALLY KING.

3. How about uniqueness and deception. Thats what this incredible 3 bdrm, 2 storey home has to offer. A deceptive dull exterior with a fantastic interior. Sample the kitchen with clay tile floors, or the small cozy sunken living room, or the large almost ¼ acre lot nestled among new homes of similar quality. To see this rarity and confirm the price, only $119,000 Call WALLY KING now.

4. What about the Uplands of the Glanford area. Wouldn't you feel proud to have your family and friends visit you in this sparkling new, 3 bdrm home that has such extras roughed in as intercom and vacuum system, separate formal dining room, etc. Sure you would! And its only $95,000. Hurry Call WALLY KING now!

5. If you prefer picking your colors, fixtures, styles, etc. and you need lots of room, 4 bdrms, and you want top quality construction then hurry and all on this huge home thats almost in the finishing stages. Only $117,000. WALLY KING.

6. If you want to be independent and need a residence but can't afford to buy both, then consider this fast food take out business (easy to learn) and nice 3 bdrm residence priced at $77,900. Check with WALLY KING for info.

7. P.S. If you have a home or property to sell first, I would be happy to give you an estimate of value without any obligation. WALLY KING.

LAND?

Looking for Vancouver Island Land? We have a 1650 Acres parcel. Is that enough? It's 1½ miles North East of Nanaimo City, $1,250,000. Maybe you had something smaller in mind. Or maybe 10 acres zoned for 400 multifamily units at $2500./unit. Just a place for yourself? We can take a look at 6.5 acres on the water north of Cordova Bay with 4000 sq. ft. of house for $255,000. Or five acres with a unique contemporary house, ten minutes from town. Or maybe an incredible price on 5 acres with a huge barn and estate like house in Sidney.

We can also put you in a little cabin up on the Sunshine Coast near Powell River/Lund, B.C. with 5.6 acres for $18,000 or 10 acres for $24,900. (Community Property Agreement)

If it's land you wnat for investment, for recreation, for a home, call the specialists at Northern Pacific Realty.

The Lord is my Shepherd

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake

Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff
they comfort me

before me in the
enemies

Thou anointest my head with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

The family of the late Mary Theresa Shirreff wish to acknowledge with thanks the many cards, flowers and donations to the Heart Fund received from friends and relatives during our recent loss of a loving wife, mother and grandmother. Special thanks to my parents, my sisters and their families, Mrs. Dorothy Barber and Reverend D.F. Johnston for their comfort and understanding. Also to the doctors and staff of the Royal Jubilee and Victoria General Hospital for the care and attention over the past year.
John E. (Jack) Shirreff and family

WE WISH TO EXTEND OUR grateful appreciation to friends and relatives for their kindness and support during the recent loss of our wife and mother. A special thanks to the Ladies Auxiliary of the Chemainus Legion, Branch #191, whose assistance was very much appreciated. Earl English and family.

309 IN MEMORIAM

CRONK - In loving memory of Albert who passed away one year ago today.
Each day begins & ends
With memories of you
A Husband true and kind
So very much loved
And so terribly missed.
Marjorie

MANHAS - In loving memory of Dalel Manhas who passed away Feb. 26, 1969.
Sadly missed by his wife Mrs. Manhas.

THOMAS - Joe, in loving memory of my brother Joe, passed away Feb. 26, 1979.

Nass dam planned, says MLA

An NDP MLA said Monday he has learned that B.C. Hydro is planning a dam on the Nass River within 15 years.

Al Passarell, the member for Atlin, said he has been told the dam is the fifth priority on the government corporation's list.

Passarell said the dam would produce electricity for export to the U.S. but B.C. residents would foot the bill for the project through increased hydro bills.

The MLA said the Nishga Indian band is against any dam construction until all land claims in the area have been settled.

Before the judge

A 19-year-old was charged in provicial court Monday with the Feb. 8 beating and robbing of a city taxi driver.

Richard Mauro Valenzuela, 1315 Minto, charged with robbery with violence, was remanded until today for election of trial method and possible bail hearing.

Claus Hellmodt, a 56-year-old driver for Victoria Taxi, suffered a broken nose and cheekbone when he was attacked and robbed of $170 in the 600-block Moss Street about 6 a.m. His assailant took the vehicle and abandoned it at the nearby Sir James Douglas elementary school grounds.

Judge Harold Alder denied bail to 51-year-old John Patrick Harris, 69 Menzies.

He is charged with possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking and trafficking in marijuana, and was remanded in custody until Friday for election of his trial method.

Michael Anthony Armer and Kay Ann Carey, both 17, recently returned from Calgary and with no fixed addresses, pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana.

Crown counsel Martha McNeely told the court they were checked Saturday afternoon in a car at Thetis Lake Park. Seven baggies of marijuana (50 grams) were found in Carey's handbag and another baggie was found on Armer, who claimed ownership of all eight baggies.

"That is a fair amount," said Alder who fined them $100 each.

A 19-year-old, whose 41-year-old father pleaded guilty Friday to two counts of indecently assaulting his 16-year-old daughter, pleaded guilty to committing incest against the same person — his sister — in an unrelated incident.

The younger man pleaded guilty to a Jan. 21 incident in Saanich while his father pleaded guilty to incidents Dec. 8 and 9 aboard his fishing vessel at Fisherman's Wharf.

(Both men's names, given in court, are not being published because of this newspaper's policy to protect the identity of victims of sexual offences where possible.)

Both have been remanded to March 11 for a pre-sentence report and sentencing.

Donald James Jorgensen, 19, of 1 Woodville, was remanded in custody until today for election and possible bail hearing on charges of breaking and entering and possession of stolen property.

Jorgensen is charged with eight counts of breaking and entering, three at Cornell Chevrolet-Oldsmobile, 3050 Douglas, on Jan. 10, and Feb. 22 and 24, two at Budget Rent-A-Car, 1721 Island Highway, on Jan. 12 and Feb. 15, and one each at Six Mile Cafe, 490 Island Highway, on Jan. 11, Millstream Shell, 9834 Trans-Canada Highway, on Dec. 27, and Mill Bay Pharmacy, on Dec. 27.

He was also charged with possession of stolen cars.

Philip Wayne Stone, 20, of 580 Whiteside, pleaded guilty to public mischief and was fined $200 for misleading Colwood RCMP in connection with a Jan. 20 car accident.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said the accident occurred shortly after midnight at Spencer and the Trans-Canada. When police arrived, Mulligan said, Stone and another person were standing near a pickup truck which was on its side. Stone insisted he was the driver but a subsequent investigation showed the other person had been driving at the time of the mishap.

Stone told the court he was trying to protect the other person, who had a number of outstanding warrants for his arrest.

Cheryl Ann Heglin, 4123 Interurban, who also pleaded guilty to public mischief, was given a suspended sentence, six months probation, and 50 hours of community service work for reporting a fictitious robbery Feb. 2.

Court was informed Heglin advised police about 11:45 p.m. that a female, whom she named, approached her in the 600-block View and made threats before taking a purse.

Victoria police investigation later showed the person accused of the offence was not in the city on the day in question. Heglin then admitted the allegation was false.

She told Alder the person named has stolen things from her in the past.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: James Arthur Anderson, 34, of Cowichan Bay, $450; Robert Henry Kitchen, 31, of 6046 Canada, Duncan, $400; and Michael Douglas Milligan, 21, of 3050 Pickford, $400.

Anderson also was fined $200 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Man jailed nine months for wrench attack on wife

A 44-year-old man was sentenced Monday in B.C. Supreme Court to nine months in jail for beating his estranged wife with a socket wrench.

Kenneth Lucas Carter was found guilty Feb. 7 by a jury of intentionally wounding Maureen Carter, 40, during a domestic dispute in a Saanich house April 28.

He was also sentenced to 14 days in jail for common assault against his wife's friend, June Burns, who intervened in the dispute.

Carter must serve two years probation after being released and must not possess any firearm for five years after his release.

Mr. Justice Howard Callaghan said Carter had committed a violent attack on his wife who was living separately from him in the Burns house.

He said Carter entered the Burns house and either from jealousy or frustration struck his wife a number of times with a socket wrench, breaking her left wrist and one finger and causing bruises and abrasions to her scalp.

"Fortunately, you came to your senses when you saw blood on your wife's hands," said Callaghan.

The judge said it was apparent that in the last few years Carter was under emotional strain from a business failure and discord in his marriage.

Carter was undoubtedly depressed, angry and frustrated, particularly at the separation which occurred March 31.

"But still, you are not justified in losing your self-control," said Callaghan.

While he was impressed with the request by defence counsel Jeff Green for leniency, the punishment must deter not only Carter but others.

In county court Monday, Charles Michael Verne, 25, was given a nominal one day in jail and fined $500 for possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking in Oak Bay March 17 and Stanley George Robindeau Cardinal, 27, was fined $200 for obtaining an antenna and coaxial cable from Tandy Electronics, 3970 Shelbourne, with a worthless cheque March 7, 1978.

Pipe pitch private

Oak Bay council decided Monday night to find out, but privately, why the Capital Regional District stored $420,000-worth of pipe which may have deteriorated.

Ald. Isabel Craig said she is concerned about reading in the newspapers that the pipe, stored near Alpha Street, may be in bad condition because of the way it has been piled and left unprotected for the last two years.

She asked, by way of a motion, for a clarification from the CRD of why it was stored in such a way.

But Ald. Neil Swainson thought the matter would be best raised in an off-the-record fashion, referring to an earlier instance of sorting out problems regarding sewage discharge from Clover and McMicking Points.

Craig, who said she wanted clarification either way, withdrew her first motion in favor of an in-camera explanation.

Council also decided to refer two letters protesting a proposed five-storey apartment building at Monterey and Oak Bay Avenue to Committee A but not before three aldermen expressed either reservations or opposition to the proposal.

Mayor Doug Watts said because of work this year on Oak Bay's Official Community Plan, council should proceed slowly on all rezoning applications.

Council referred to Committee B complaints from residents in the 2600-block Burdick that their water has been discolored since mains were flushed just over a year ago.

One resident said rust particles are ruining her washing machine and discoloring her clothes and another said seven houses are affected.

Ald. Peter Bunn said he wants specific reccomendations to the committee based on sound engineering practices.

"It's a pretty intolerable situation to go on for that length of time," he said.

Rip-off claim denied by tow firm manager

The manager of Gordon's Towing defended the company Monday against the accusations of an angry American tourist who claimed he'd been ripped off Sunday night.

Bob Gregg of Vancouver, Wash. told the Times that a Gordon's tow lot operator wouldn't give him the exchange rate on the U.S. $20 bill he used to pay the $16 towing charge and refused to give it back when he offered a credit card instead.

His rental car was also damaged in the short tow from the lot on Wharf Street where he parked (he said he didn't see the signs which required drivers to buy tickets) to Gordon's impoundment lot at 50 Songhees Road.

But Gordon's manager "J.B.", who refused to give his name because of possible retaliation, denied Gregg's version of events and recounted a series of violent run-ins with drivers.

Did the tourist have any grounds for complaint?

"Not a bit, no," he said.

The $20 bill was taken by a tow truck driver who was "cashing out" for the night shortly after Gregg paid the towing charge.

And the dispatcher said the tourist never showed a credit card, as he claimed. His complaint about damage to the steering wheel was noted, but the manager was somewhat skeptical. Gregg was asked to fill in a complaint form.

"You wouldn't believe the complaint forms we get. Every single scratch on a car a guy's going to claim for. Wouldn't you?" he said.

"We get blamed for every nasty thing that happens, but people don't see the other side."

One dispatcher had a gun pulled on him and another woman dispatcher was beaten up one night by two men. Another man punched in a plexiglass window in a booth in the tow lot.

It's company policy for employees not to give their names because vengeful motorists have retaliated against them.

The manager also was angry at a Metchosin woman who asked in a letter to the editor of the Colonist why Gordon's wouldn't accept cheques. She was stranded downtown late one night and if she hadn't been with friends would have faced a walk of several miles.

The manager said Gordon's used to accept cheques but so many came back NSF that the policy was ended.

Eight running in C. Saanich

Two candidates for mayor and six for aldermen are in the running in a March 15 byelection caused by the resignation of Mayor Jean Butler of Central Saanich.

When nominations closed at noon Monday aldermen Frank Waring and Dave Hill had filed for the mayoralty, leaving two council vacancies.

Competing for the term that expires at the end of this year are businessman Edward Gait, housewife Leona King and professional engineer Robert Smith.

Candidates for the two-year term are homemaker-co-ordinator Ruth Arnaud, lawyer Flemming Hansen and airline employee Raymond Lamont.

Brannen improved, says Mair

Efficiency of the residential drug treatment centre at Brannen Lake has improved with removal of the compulsory aspect of the heroin addiction program, Health Minister Rafe Mair said Monday.

No decision on the ultimate fate of the centre near Nanaimo will be made for perhaps six months, the minister said.

He said the ministry is making a full examination not only of the facility, which can accommodate 150, but the whole alcohol and drug abuse program, with a view to developing a policy for the future.

Mair said the mix of compulsory and volunteer patients was not good.

Patients have doubled to 50 since compulsory treatment was dropped.

Pen nurses get equal pay in landmark ruling

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Human Rights Commission announced Monday a landmark settlement with the federal government that increases the wages of six female penitentiary nurses to match higher pay received by their male colleagues.

Under the settlement, three women employed at the Springhill penitentiary in Nova Scotia and three at the Dorchester penitentiary in New Brunswick get wage increases that put them on a par with male health technicians who have been doing the same work but getting higher pay since the early 70s.

The six women also get almost two years' back pay to make up for the difference dating to April, 1978, when their union first sought equal pay for them.

In addition, the treasury board — the federal government's payroll department — has agreed to review salary differences among health workers in other penitentiaries and to adjust them if they exist as a result of sexual discrmination.

Rita Cadieux, deputy chief commissioner of the human rights commission, described the settlement as a precedent that should stimulate complaints from other unfairly-paid women and smooth the way for eventual equality in wage payments by the federal government and employers under federal jurisdiction.

"For us it's important because we have made the act work once and can make it work many other times," said Ms. Cadieux, referring to the Human Rights Act which prohibits federal employers from paying people different wages if they are doing work of equal value.

Leona Mollis, the 37-year-old nurse at Springhill who lodged the complaint about the pay scales, is barely satisfied with the settlement and regards it as just the tip of an iceberg.

"It's not a huge victory although it's about what we expected," she said in a telephone interview.

"They owe us a lot more if you want my honest opinion."

Ms. Mollis is at the top of the wage scale so she will get $1,054.29 in a lump sum for back pay and her annual salary will rise to the top male rate of $17,298 from the top female rate of $16,300.

Nurses at the minimum rate will get a lump sun of $2,112.28 to close the gap between the minimum sale rate of $16,141 and the minimum female rate of $14,286.

The male and female groups each are represented by different unions, the Public Service Alliance of Canada and the Professional Institute of the Public Service, respectively.

The women are negotiating a new collective agreement and a treasury board spokesman said that whatever the outcome of negotiations, they will end up earning as least as much as the men.

Ms. Mollis suggested the women are entitled to higher wages than the men because they are professionally-trained and qualified nurses while the men are not. The men are health care officers — technicians for short.

"The only differences were that the nurses were better qualified and the men were better paid," said the commission paper explaining the lengthy procedure that led to the settlement.

Meanwhile, in Edmonton, a woman's group says women should receive preference in hiring and promotions until they hold at least 50 per cent of public service management jobs.

Marg Smith, co-ordinator for the Alberta Status of Women Action Committee, said if half of the 33,000 Alberta government employees are women then half of the 3,000 management jobs in government should be held by women too.

The latest government figures show that only about nine per cent of management jobs now are held by women.

Until the 50-per-cent target has been achieved and if two candidates apply for a job and both are equally qualified, the job should go to the female candidate, said Ms. Smith.

Radon tests forced

REGINA (CP) — Air and water radiation tests will start next week at the northern Saskatchewan communities of Black Lake and Fond Du Lac, Dr. Pat Prestage, director of the Regina office of the federal health and welfare department, said.

He said the decision to make tests was based on the concerns of teachers at Black Lake.

Six of the nine teachers there resigned Monday, and parents pulled 180 children out of school.

The resignations and withdrawals were based on a 3½-year-old finding of radon gas and the radioactive products of its breakdown in the basements of five buildings at Black Lake, including the school.

Exposure to radon and its "daughters" in large concentrations or for prolonged periods of time can cause lung cancer.

The 1976 survey found the substances present at between .001 and ,016 working levels.

Rose Marie Geiger, one of the teachers who resigned, said Monday the action was taken to back up demands for a comprehensive sampling of air and water in the community.

Mrs. Geiger said the teachers had been in touch with Fred Knelman, professor at Concordia University and author of a book on radiation. She said Knelman "felt the .016 W.L. (working level) in one building was unacceptable."

United Way blasts welfare

McCarthy disputes figures

Most welfare recipients in Greater Vancouver are still living below the poverty level, says a United Way report released today.

And Victoria welfare recipients are just as badly off, according to a spokesman for the agency.

Bruce Levens was commenting on a report by The United Way's Lower Mainland social planning and research committee

The report states flatly that assistance benefits have remained at the same degree of inadequacy for the last 20 years.

Levens, assistant director of the committee, said while shelter costs in Victoria may be slightly lower than Vancouver, food costs might be a bit higher.

"The situations would definitely be comparable," Levens said.

The report says that pricing a basketful of low-cost food, allowing for clothes, personal care and bus travel, points to a money shortfall of from 51 to 75 per cent for persons first going on welfare, and of 12 to 75 per cent for longer-term recipients.

Victoria United Way board member Harold Moist agrees with Levens.

"Of course, by the time we get the reports out and the government reacts, we're already another year behind, and the government never gives everything that's asked for anyway."

Moist had high praise for the social planning and research committee.

"They've always been known for being objective and very careful with their reports," he said.

"They have a reputation for being very accurate with their figures."

But Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy today called the figures misleading.

"They're comparing oranges and apples," she said.

"We warned them of that last year. They said they were sorry and they understood the problem. Now this year they've done the same thing again."

The most blatant error, she said, is that the United Way used high Lower Mainland rents as the basis for calculating shelter costs.

"They have ignored the many welfare recipients in rooming houses and boarding houses," she said, and based their calculations on Vancouver's high-rent districts like Shaughnessy and the West End.

She also said the United Way figures ignore client earnings and other benefits received such as family allowances, renters allowance and child tax credits.

"If these adjustments are made, the client's disposable income would be found to at least match and probably exceed the need levels established by the United Way and Statistics Canada," she said.

McCarthy said since 1976, welfare rates have increased far faster than they would have if they had been indexed to the cost of living.

However, NDP critic Rosemary Brown called the United Way's poverty level figures "very conservative, far below the ones chosen by the Canadian Council on Social Development or the Bureau of Statistics."

"There is absolutely no way a person in receipt of welfare can even live at the United Way's poverty level," she said.

The report says singles and couples under 31 years of age are particularly hard hit and are forced to choose between eating less and moving into inadequate but cheaper accommodations.

The study, based on figures supplied by the human resources ministry which administers the GAIN program, says a 36-year-old woman with a boy, 10, and a girl, 13, needs $693 a month for food and shelter.

Her maximum income from GAIN, if she has been on income assistance less than four months, is $560, leaving a shortfall of $133.

The same family, on assistance for more than four months, would receive $595 from GAIN, leaving a permanent monthly shortfall of $98.

The report says a couple with three children under 12 would require an estimated

Shah victims tell horrors

TEHRAN (Reuter) — Each mangled limb, each scar, each disfigured face told a story of torture, beating and random shooting, as some 200 Iranians lined up in the snow today, waiting for a chance to talk about their life under the now-deposed shah of Iran.

They had come to testify before a United Nations commission investigating grievances against the former monarch. As they waited outside the UN office here, they related to reporters their horror stories.

Some said they had spent years in the shah's prisons, while others carried pictures of sons and daughters who they said died protesting the shah's rule, beaten to death in jail or gunned down by security forces during street demonstrations.

"In November, 1978, when there were demonstrations outside, some soldiers burst into our house and shot my son," said one man, his eyes red with tears at the memory.

And, said a 23-year-old business graduate: "I was arrested for possessing a photograph of Imam (Ayatollah) Khomeini. In prison the secret police attached electrodes to my testicles and tortured me."

Another man pulled up his trousers to reveal long, ugly scars on both legs which he said were the result of being burned with a soldering iron during a spell in prison in the central Iranian city of Isfahan.

"The SAVAK (secret police) in Isfahan beat me so badly on the head that I lost my hearing in one ear and I cannot see straight," said a thin youth, waving a medical report describing his condition when he was released from jail in October, 1978.

A university lecturer came to tell the five-man UN panel of lawyers and diplomats about his nephew, shot dead during a sit-in at the higher education ministry here on Christmas Day, 1978.

A source close to the commission said examination of the allegations will continue "for the next couple of days." The UN commission also heard testimony from Iranian jurists Monday about the shah's alleged misdeeds.

Bani-Sadr made his first visit to the embassy Monday since he was elected president Jan. 25 and, with other members of the governing Revolutionary Council, joined some of the militants on a platform atop the wall surrounding the compound.

Thousands paraded past in snow and rain, chanting anti-American slogans and holding up Khomeini post-

Times News Services

President Carter, in a letter delivered to Yugoslavia today, offered to support a neutral Afghanistan if the Soviet Union withdraws promptly from that Southwest Asian country.

Carter's comments, in response to a letter from gravely ill Yugoslav President Tito, followed an apparent offer by the Soviet Union to withdraw "as soon as all forms of outside interference directed against the government and people of Afghanistan are fully terminated."

Details of Carter's letter were described by an official of his administration who asked not to be identified by name.

In his report, the official said Carter "reaffirms that the United States did not interfere in the internal affairs of Afghanistan and that with the prompt withdrawal of all Soviet troops from that country, the United States would be willing to join in a guarantee of true neutrality and non-interference in Afghanistan's internal affairs."

The official declined to characterize Carter's letter as a response to a speech Friday by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

In that speech, Brezhnev said: "Let the U.S. together with the neighbors of Afghanistan guarantee (non-interference) and then the needs of Soviet military assistance will cease to exist."

Carter's comments were contained in a letter delivered today in Belgrade, the official said. He was answering a letter from Tito, who wrote to Carter and Brezhnev in a plea for continued detente between the superpowers.

The source said a guarantee of neutrality would involve, in addition to the United States, Afghanistan's neighbors — Iran, Pakistan and the Soviet Union.

Meanwhile, in further efforts to express displeasure with Soviet military involvement in Afghanistan, Carter Monday banned the export of phosphates to the Soviet Union.

The ban "for an indefinite period" followed the temporary embargo begun Feb. 6 by the administration.

Phosphates are used in fertilizers and as animal-feed supplements.

But administration officials opposed a congressional move Monday to bar Soviet merchant ships from U.S. ports, saying Carter has sufficiently responded to the Soviet invasion.

More than 50 members of the House, including Merchant Marine Committee chairman John Murphy, D-N.Y., have sponsored a resolution urging Carter to give

Ferry squeeze tightens

Times' newstand price up

Due to continuing heavy increases in newsprint and other production material costs, the newsstand and street vendor price of the Victoria Times will be increased to 25 cents on weekdays effective Monday, March 3. Saturday Weekend edition price will remain at 30 cents.

There is no increase in the carrier home delivery rate of $4.50 per month and current mail rates also remain unchanged.

Readers wishing the convenience of daily home delivery, at an average saving of $1 per month, please phone the Times circulation department at 382-3131.

A week's delay in starting the modifications to the Queen of Prince Rupert will make it tough to get the ferry ready for the normal start of the Seattle-Victoria run, a spokesman for the B.C. Steamship Corporation said today.

Transport Minister Alex Fraser's announced today the ferry will continue on the Prince Rupert, Bella Bella and Ocean Falls run until April 6.

Originally the Rupert was to be pulled off the run April 1 to enter drydock for major renovations before starting the Victoria-Seattle service in mid-May.

The BCSC spokesman warned the week's delay in starting the modifications will make things "very tight".

"Even with six weeks it was going to be tight, this makes it that much tighter," he said.

He said the modifications will be fairly extensive and BCSC officials are guessing the work will be done by the Yarrows shipyard because of the availability of the Esquimalt Graving Dock.

Yarrows general manager Don Challinor said he cannot confirm this until B.C. Ferries makes an announcement.

B.C. Ferries operations manager George Baldwin was not available for comment.

Fraser said the extra week on the mid-coast run "hopefully" should not interfere with the traditional start of the summer service to Seattle in mid-May.

The extra week will cover the Easter holiday period that was concerning people in the three facilities.

With the ferry Queen of Surrey not scheduled to take over the mid-coast run until June 1, residents of the coastal communities have been complaining loudly they would be without their basic transportation for two months.

Now Fraser says the Surrey should be out of drydock by May 7 and, following trial runs, take over the mid-coast service by May 15, and possibly earlier.

With the Rupert staying on an extra week and the Surrey going into service earlier than scheduled, "that means instead of a hiatus of two months we're talking about maybe five weeks of no service for the coast," Fraser said.

Seat it and eat it

SEATTLE (AP) — Eaten any good chairs lately?

If not, here's your chance. The Pacific Science Center is sponsoring an edible chair contest on March 15 in conjunction with a chair design exhibition.

The rules state the chair must be 90 per cent edible — composed of vegetables, bread, cake or candy held together by toothpicks, glue, wire or rubber bands. The science centre says no chairs of ice or meat products will be allowed.

The chair doesn't have to be lifesize or capable of supporting weight but it must resemble a chair and have four legs and a back.

Single decal stops sneaks

If you're wondering why you get only one licence plate decal for your car this year instead of two, it's a bid by the motor vehicles branch to keep the motoring public honest.

Superintendent of Motor Vehicles R.G. Whitlock explains there has been a lot of fancy licence-plate shuffling in past years.

Some sneaky drivers who own two vehicles would buy just one set of plates then use a single plate on each car, thus saving himself the cost of licencing and insuring the second vehicle.

Now it's a one-decal, one-car situation.

"Just issuing one decal we can adequately identify the car for most police needs and it means we don't get the misuse of plates," Whitlock said.

"We've done it before with dealers' licences and it worked very well."

All drivers have to have their new insurance decal on by the end of the month — and they go on rear licence plates.

How will Trudeau put west reps in cabinet?

Times News Services

The next Canadian House of Commons will meet with no representation in the governing Liberal party from the three western provinces and this poses a tough problem for Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau.

Trudeau's options range from appointing western senators to his cabinet to some sort of western advisory council or to the unlikely suggestion from New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent of a body of MPs selected on a proportional represenatation basis.

The Broadbent scheme has been rejected by Opposition leader Joe Clark and received a cool reception from other political leaders.

Broadbent said in Ottawa Monday it's time Parliament adopted a form of proportional representation to ensure the major parties get at least some MPs from all regions of the country.

He said 50 additional MPs should be sent to Parliament — 10 from each of the five regions of the country. Each party would receive a share of the 10 seats in proportion to the popular vote it received in the region.

The system would give the Liberals representatives where they badly need them in the West, would give the Conservatives and NDP more seats in Liberal-held Quebec, and give the NDP some seats in Atlantic Canada, where they were shut out last Monday.

It would increase the number of seats in the Commons to 332 from 282.

A Trudeau spokesman said the prime minister-designate had found the proposal "interesting" but had no intention of moving quickly on any specific proposal. He denied a report in a Toronto newspaper saying Trudeau planned to call a special session of Parliament to deal with the issue.

Trudeau plans to meet the new Parliament shortly after the April 4-6 Easter break.

Speaking in Calgary Monday, B.C.'s NDP leader Dave Barrett said Trudeau should go with the MPs who were elected in the west from the Conservative and NDP parties.

Barrett told the Petroleum Landmen Association: You in Alberta elected 21 Conservatives, we in British Columbia elected 16 Conservatives and 12 NDP.

"We pay these people good money to represent us and we don't want anyone to represent us other than those we voted for."

Barrett called on Trudeau to consult with Conservative and NDP MPs when dealing with western matters and said he would be guilty of political manipulation if he appointed senators to represent the west.

If Trudeau decides to use the Senate to give Western Canadian representation to his new cabinet, he has three main questions to answer: who, how and how many?

All are difficult questions. In the case of who, he must ask himself whether he will select some existing senators or ask some one to retire so he can replace him with somebody more suited to a cabinet post.

In the case of how, he must decide whether to give the new ministers full responsibility for portfolios or only make them what amounts to departmental spokesmen.

In the case of how many, presumably he would need at least one minister representing provinces where he has no MPs, British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan.

There are several ways a senator could represent the government in Parliament. He could be like Conservative Robert de Cotret who had almost full responsibility for industry, trade and commerce and who, at the same time, was economic development minister, a sort of super portfolio with influence over a wide area.

Or he could be a sort of associate minister, as suggested by Ray Perrault, for years Liberal leader in the chamber. This minister would speak for his department in the Senate but the portfolio would be run by a minister in the elected Commons.

Or he could be a minister of state, responsible for no department but spokesman for the government in certain areas.

If Trudeau does use the Senate he will run into opposition from Broadbent who believes the Senate should be abolished.

In the last Parliament, the Liberals were highly critical of the fact the Conservatives had put de Cotret, a defeated candidate in Ottawa, in the Senate as a minister. They complained on two grounds; de Cotret was not in the Commons to answer questions and the government had used the

Killer spill forecast every 8 years

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A controversial report dealing with a possible chlorine disaster is being released to the public by district council, after 16 months under wraps.

The report, prepared in 1978 by Beak Consultants Ltd. of Vancouver, predicts the consequences of a spill at the Hooker Chemicals plant here and discusses the probability of a serious earthquake or major railcar accident spilling toxic gases.

The report predicts a major spill every eight years of 100 to 400 tons of chlorine which could cause as many as 68 deaths and require massive evacuations.

Council voted Monday to make the report available to the public starting today and to sell copies of the report to the public at cost.

A North Shore citizens' group had been pressing for the report to be made public so proper evacuation plans can be made.

On Monday, Hooker invited reporters to tour its plant in an effort to show how safe it is.

However, L.H. Schnurstein, Hooker general manager, said the company does not know in what direction deadly chlorine gas would disperse if a major spill occurred.

Schnurstein said he isn't prepared to comment on whether he agrees with the Beak report.

However, he said earlier Hooker "cannot accept projections which do not take into account our outstanding record of safe operation over 23 years."

Meanwhile, Vancouver Mayor Jack Volrich said after a meeting with Canadian transport commission officials that he expects federal authorities will announce a program within a week to keep dangerous commodities such as chlorine out of Vancouver.

Volrich said he will ask council to approve funds for a joint study with CP Rail, Canadian National Railways and other government agencies, aimed at identifying the risks.

Gobbler prices up again

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Turkey Marketing Board raised prices for two turkey sizes by another quarter-cent on Monday.

The newest increase came a week after the board raised prices for heavy tom and broiler turkeys also by a quarter-cent.

Vancouver-area processors balked at that increase and for two days refused to kill turkeys. They then appealed the increase to the provincial government-appointed B.C Marketing Board.

The board held an information meeting last weekend and will meet with processors to discuss the increases on Thursday.

According to the federal government's latest poultry marketing report, which runs about two weeks late, B.C. turkey farmers were below Ontario producers by one cent a pound for broilers and by three cents a pound for toms.

For the wholesale market, processors in B.C. were getting about 21 cents a pound more for broiler turkeys than plants in southern Ontario, and about 18 cents a pound more for toms than Ontario processors.

At the retail level broiler turkeys on the Vancouver market ranged from $1.19 to $1.59 a pound and toms between $1.43 and $1.59 a pound, compared with $1.38 a pound for all sizes on the Toronto retail market.

THIN HOUSES have no place in their neighborhood, Point Grey residents of Vancouver say. And if real estate prices make the slivers of land between other lots worth building on, that's too bad — they musn't be allowed to lower the tone of the neighborhood. But Thelma Meeks, who demonstrates in fun how thin her house is, says the thin houses are the only way to shave the soaring prices of housing. Building permits are being sought for some lots which are only 17 feet wide, in a neighborhood where the average lot has a

The Avant Garde vouchers are issued to regular-fare transcontinental passengers and are worth a one-third discount on later flights.

Several young people have been collecting the vouchers from disembarking CP Air passengers and then selling them to other passengers.

CP Air spokesman Jim McKeachie says the airline is not concerned about the practice, so long as no one is harassed.

But RCMP point to a section of regulations governing government airport concessions, which states: "No one can advertise or solicit anything within the airport without the written permission of the minister of transport."

RCMP said people seen asking for or selling the vouchers were warned to stop. But the warnings went unheeded and the traffic in vouchers has grown so much that RCMP are moving to enforce regulations. One person has been charged.

McKeachie said vouchers are transferable.

Tory declares

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A 25-year-old refrigeration technician announced Monday he will be a candidate to replace retiring provincial B.C. Conservative leader Vic Stephens.

Dan Donnelly is the first to announce he is seeking the post.

Stephens, who represented Oak Bay as the party's only member, was defeated in last May's provincial election.

Former MLA a liar: McKitka

NEW WESTMINSTER, (CP) — A onetime Social Credit MLA who testified former Surrey mayor Ed McKitka asked him for $100,000 in exchange for getting a land use contract was lying, McKitka said in B.C. Supreme Court Monday.

McKitka, who is facing nine criminal charges, testified he was not personally involved in any land transactions while he was mayor and said the accusation was made to discredit him politically.

In earlier testimony, Loewen said McKitka had asked him for the $100,000.

"He is a liar," said McKitka.

McKitka, who is currently a Surrey alderman, said he had a legitimate discussion with Loewen about a proposed new development in Surrey and denied he asked what he would make out of the project.

Instead, McKitka said, Loewen asked him if the former mayor wanted an election camapign contribution. McKitka said he refused the offer.

McKitka also denied he ever attempted to delay Loewen's development project in council.

He agreed he did mention to Loewen the sum of $100,000 but said the amount referred to a question from Loewen about excavation costs.

McKitka denied he ever received funds other than campaign contributions from local developers.

The counts against McKitka include charges that he breached the trust of his office and demanded benefits for disclosing confidential zoning information to developers.

Defence lawyer H. A. D. Oliver told the jury McKitka would attempt to place wiretap evidence gathered by the RCMP from bugs on McKitka's phone in context.

"Now, if one takes conversations like this out of context, it will be obvious that one could prove almost anything," Oliver said.

"The Crown has succeeded in creating a general atmosphere of suspicion but you're not going to convict anyone on the basis of suspicion."

McKitka testified Monday he was joking when he suggested that land developer Joe Beck put up $25,000 so McKitka could buy a Surrey chicken farm.

"I'm a bit of a joker," he said. "In the mayor's office you can either be a stuffed shirt or put a little life into the place. I put life into the place."

McKitka also denied that in 1977 he threatened then Surrey alderman Bill Millar in an attempt to get support for a controversial racetrack proposal.

The trial continues.

CANADA SOCIAL INSURANCE NUMBER STUDY

The Government of Canada has requested that the Privacy Commissioner conduct a study with respect to the use of the Social Insurance Number and the implication of such use for the privacy of individuals.

In particular, the terms of reference of the study are:

1. The Minister of Justice has requested the Privacy Commissioner, and the Privacy Commissioner has agreed, to conduct a study with respect to the use of the Social Insurance Number, and the implications of such use for the privacy of individuals, by:

a) corporations, organizations and other bodies in the private sector which come within the legislative authority of Parliament; and

b) institutions in the public sector which come within the legislative authority of Parliament other than those to which the provisions of Part IV of the Canadian Human Rights Act apply.

2. In consultation with provincial governments, the Privacy Commissioner is also to study the use of the Social Insurance Number by provincial and municipal governments and the implications of such use for the privacy of individuals.

3. The Privacy Commissioner in conducting this study is authorized to receive and consider submissions and comments from any source with respect to the use of the Social Insurance Number and the relationship of such use to privacy.

4. The study by the Privacy Commissioner is to examine the following matters:

a) the extent to which the Social Insurance Number is collected and used by those corporations, organizations, institutions, governments and other bodies which are within the scope of this study;

b) the purposes for which the Social Insurance Number is used;

c) whether or not the Social Insurance Number is used as a data-linkage device and, if so, the extent and implications of such use;

d) whether or not the collection and use of the Social Insurance Number represents a threat to the privacy of individuals and, if so, the nature and extent of this threat;

e) the possible implications of the regulation or prohibition of the collection or use of the Social Insurance Number.

5. The Privacy Commissioner is to advise and make recommendations with respect to the above and in particular is:

a) to advise and make recommendations with respect to whether or not the collection and use of the Social Insurance Number should be regulated or prohibited;

b) if so, to advise and make recommendations with respect to the manner in which this should be done, and

c) to advise and make recommendations with respect to any other matter relating to the collection and use of the Social Insurance Number and the consequential implications for the privacy of individuals.

6. The Privacy Commissioner shall submit her report on the use of the Social Insurance Number to the Minister of Justice.

Interested persons, governments, corporations, organizations and other bodies are invited to provide written briefs, comments and information with respect to any of the matters included in the terms of reference. The Privacy Commissioner has been required to submit a report prior to 1 August, 1980, and no public hearings are contemplated at this time. Briefs and comments should be submitted before 1 May, 1980, to:

Youth club funds eyed

The Langford Boys and Girls Club will likely get the funding it wants but from a different source and with some strings attached.

The club earlier this year asked the Juan de Fuca Recreation Commission for money to hire additional staff and increase its programs for youngsters and teenagers in Colwood and Langford and possibly Metchosin.

But the recreation commission said it isn't the body to supply such funding.

The three regional directors for the areas have agreed in principle to apply to the provincial government for funding from the grants-in-aid program that is available for recreation projects in unorganized areas.

But Colwood director and commission chairman Howard Drummond said there will be strings attached.

Drummond said the money can't be used to hire staff because it's intended as a one-time effort rather than to establish an on-going project.

Directors will also want to take a close look at any capital projects the club proposes for the funding, he said, and details of the agreement would have to be worked out.

The club currently has two main objectives that require funding during the next year, says club worker Dena Blatchford.

It wants to expand the programs it offers in the western community and it wants to have a permanent home, she said.

Blatchford is working on a project to improve the basement of the Langford Legion building on Station Road so it can be used as a clubhouse and money from the grants-in-aid program might be useful for that project.

But, she said, the club already has an application in for capital funds for the work.

Alaska gold strike

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Significant amounts of gold and other minerals have been discovered in an unexplored river basin about 264 kilometres northeast of Anchorage, a state agency said Monday.

State geologist Ross Schaff said samples taken in the Nelchina River basin last August indicate "unusual anomalies of lead, zinc, copper, silver and gold" in amounts that show potential for development.

The exact location of the find will be in a report to be released today.

In the report, miners also will be told the area's mineral concentrations, the quality of assays produced so far and other aspects of the area's general geology.

Claims on the area will be accepted on a first-come, first-serve basis at the district recording office in Palmer.

News of the discovery apparently leaked out during a state budget hearing.

Saanich fights to keep obstetrics

Sidney council and Capital Region District hospital planners clashed Monday night over a proposal to remove obstetric services from Saanich Peninsula Hospital on Mount Newton Crossroad.

Regional hospital planner Murray Halkett said the services should be moved to the new Hemlcken Road hospital when it opens in 1982 because it will provide better medical care for high-risk cases.

Halkett said the inconvenience is a small price to pay to minimize the chance of brain damage or other problems developing in such cases.

But council, led by Mayor Norma Sealey, opposed the plan.

Sealey said the level of care provided at the peninsual hospital is superior in some respects to Victoria hospitals.

She said the hospital is warm, family-like, and convenient for local people.

Sealey said she doesn't accept Halkett's contention that high-risk infants might be placed in jeopardy.

Halkett was playing on emotions, she said.

"It unfairly suggests that someone who doesn't go along with (the plan) will be somehow responsible for brain-damaged children."

In the past two years there have been about 300 births at the hospital and no deaths.

The mortality rate at all hospitals in the area is seven per 1,000 live births.

Planner-opposed shops approved

Saanich council Monday approved rezoning for a medium-sized shopping centre at Kismer and Broadmead against the advice of chief planner Gil Laurenson.

Laurenson recommended the land, near Shelbourne and Cedar Hill Crossroad, be used for apartments because there are enough shopping centres in the area.

At the public hearing, former Saanich alderman Ian Cass called for an end to commercial-retail development along the northern end of Shelbourne.

Ald. Robert Cameron warned uncontrolled development along Shelbourne would turn the area into one like Kingsway in Vancouver.

Jobless hits 6.1%

LONDON (Reuter) — Unemployment in Britain rose to 1,488,923 this month, 6.1 per cent of the work force, government statistics released today show.

The February increase of 18,352 jobless appeared to be partly due to the effects of the current strike in the state-owned steel industry.

It was the fifth consecutive monthly rise, a trend which some labor leaders blame on the government's policy of cutting public spending.

ROYAL TRUST GUIDES YOU AROUND THE BUMPS.

We show you mistakes to watch out for.

Everyone agrees that RRSP's are one of the very best ways to increase retirement income and reduce current income taxes. But not everyone knows about the little RRSP mistakes that can reduce that income.

We do. Here are some of the more obvious ones. Our free booklet will help you understand more about RRSP's and how they work.

Steer clear of places that don't offer a full range of plans.

There are different kinds of RRSP's, providing various combinations of security, interest earnings and flexibility. Royal Trust offers a unique range of six plans. Our booklet and good advice will give you a clear picture of how your choice of plans today will benefit you at retirement, or even in a few years' time.

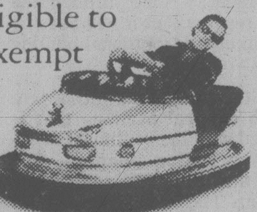
Dodge the misuse of cash. Borrowing your RRSP money may be the wiser way.

Say you have money set aside for your RRSP, yet at the same time, you're planning a loan for some other major purchase. That could be a mistake...you may be wiser to use your cash for that purchase, and borrow the money for your RRSP.

You see, Royal Trust offers Tax Saver Loans for RRSP's, and they have one big advantage: Interest payments on Tax Saver Loans (except for loans taken for spousal RRSP's) are tax deductible in the year they're paid...so tax savings can offset a portion of your interest costs. In short, you could be well ahead.

Don't dent your retirement income by putting all your deposits in your own RRSP, when maybe you should contribute to a plan in the name of your spouse.

This can often earn you the same tax advantages today while gaining you some very valuable future tax savings when the retirement income is received.



For instance, if you both have plans, then you'll both be eligible to receive the first $1,000 tax exempt each year when you draw on them for retirement income after age 65. Further, it often makes sense to build retirement income in the name of the person expecting the lower marginal tax rate after retirement.

Pick up this free booklet at any of our branches.
